TORREON BATTLE LOSSES 4,200

DEFY FOES OF CAMBRIDGE BOXING

TORREON PYRES ARE LIGHTED

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The total losses in the fighting at Torreon were 4,200 men, according to figures given in advice received from Consul Carrethers at the State Department today. General Villa lost about 1,200 men and the Federal loss is estimated at 3,000.

CONSTITUTIONALIST ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Gomez Palacio, April 4.—While squads of Constitutionalist soldiers are lining up Federal prisoners in batches and shooting them to death in Torreon today, General Villa is rushing with a large force of his best troops to deal a final and destroying blow to the little army of government fighters with which General Refugio Velasco fled from the battered town.

General Herrera notified headquarters here early today that General Villa had left shortly after midnight for San Pedro de las Colonias after receiving a message from General Rosalio Hernandez that the cavalry pursuing the shattered Federal forces had surrounded them in the hills south of that town.

General Hernandez stated that he would kill or capture all of Velasco's men, but Villa is taking no chances on a junction of the government reinforcements sent from Saltillo and Monterey with Velasco's troops. Immediately after receiving the report from Fernandez he ordered his troops forward, leaving only enough in Torreon to complete the grewsome task of burning the dead there and executing the Federal prisoners.

In his flight toward San Pedro, where he hoped to find troops coming to his aid, General Velasco was forced to abandon the cannon and supplies with which he slipped out of Torreon. He is supposed to have between 3,000 and 4,000 men.

In Torreon itself today the rebel firing squads and medical corps worked rapidly. Though it is impossible to obtain accurate figures as to the number executed since the city fell, observers of the work of the executioners believe that at least 450 have been killed.

Cargo of Lard on Leyland Liner Destroyed by Fire

The biggest "fry" of lard that Boston ever knew came today when fire started in the forehold of the Leyland freighter Kingstonian, which had taken aboard part of a cargo of bulk lard, packed in wooden cases. The cargo and ship were damaged $3,500 from fire, smoke and water.

The Kingstonian, tied up at the Hoosac Tunnel docks, Charlestown, was scheduled to sail this afternoon for London.

A fireboat quickly drowned out the fire.

CURLEY RULE IS COSTLY

Mayor Curley's administration has cost $113,939.08 more, to April 1, than the corresponding period of last year, according to the figures published in the city Record, the municipal publication.

The increase in the cost of running the city, in those departments which are under the control, financially, of the Mayor was $105,761.64 more than the corresponding period for last year. The increase in the departments over which the Mayor has no control, such as the police and school departments and the Licensing Board was $8,177.24.

The total for this year of the departments under the control of the Mayor was $2,872,654.74; for the same period last year, $2,766,892.90. The total this year for departments not under control of the Mayor was $1,700,036.75 and for last year $1,691,859.51.

Of those departments not under control of the Mayor, the police department last year in the ocresponding period, cost $446,957.95, and this year, with the increase in salaries which carried Mayor Curley to Beacon Hill in his fight against Police Commissioner O'Meara, cost $430,747.74. This is $16,210.21 less this year than it was last year, occording to the official figures. The dischepancy is explained by City Auditor Mitchell however. In this year's figures, wherever departments are paid by the week, the figures are for only eight weeks, whereas the figures for last year included nine weekly payrolls orr the same period of time.

The departments under the control of the Mayor for the corresponding period (from February first to April firt) of the year 1912, cost $2,588,158.63, as against $2,766,892.90 for 1913, and $2,872,654.74 for this year.

The departments not under the control of the Mayor, cost in 1912, $1,550,169.37; in 1913, $1,691,859.51; and in 1914, $1,700,036.75.

OPPOSE PASTORS ON BOXING

Two promoters of boxing bouts have defied Rev. William S. Macnair, pastor of the Prospect Street Congregational Church of Cambridge and President of the Cambridge Law Enforcement Association, to stop the fight game in the University City, according to a letter just written by Pastor Macnair to George O. Almy of Atlantic.

Pastor Macnair says that the fight promoters told him they would find some way to "get around the law."

The fight promoters called to coax Pastor Macnair to be more lenient toward the boxing game, but the upshot of the brief conference was that the President of the C. L. E. A. told his callers he would drive them out of the city.

Pastor Macnair's letter to Mr. Almy, who is a well-known sporting man, was in reply to the latter's suggestion that Pastor Macnair call the Cambridge clergy and boxing promoters together to talk the situation over. The pastor declines, in the following repy:

"LAW IS EXPLICIT."

Mr. George O. Almy,
Atlantic, Mass.:

Dear Sir—Your letter interests me but I do not see the need of calling together the clergymen of Cambridge to discuss the boxing situation. The law is so explicit that there is nothing further to be said. If it comes to the matter of changing the law, then it would become a matter of debate. In that case the debate would be at the State House.

Two boxing promoters have already called on me and they were most decidedly unwilling to answer my questions and they claimed that if we interfered with this business they would go right on, simply finding some way to get around the law. All this simply confirms what I knew already—that the men engaged in this business care nothing for the law, save that it pounds upon them in the form of uniformed men.

WILL CLAIM THEIR RIGHTS.

If ever the law is changed I suppose that the fight promoters will claim all their rights under the law and in that case we who are opposed to this business will naturally bow to the laws of the Commonwealth and accept the situation. This is what the boxing fraternity should do at the present time and continued evasion of the laws simply shows this fraternity in its true light.

It is no answer to say that other men evade the law. I took the same stand against the millionaires who have wrecked the railroads of New England. What we sorely need is a more wholesome respect for law on the part of rich and poor—sporting men and all men.

So far as we can bring this about in Cambridge we intend to get this and there will be no let up in our insistence that the law be enforced to the limit. If you have any influence with the fight promoters tell them that they will be wise to keep out of Cambridge.

Very truly yours
REV. WILLIAM S. MACNAIR.

MILITANTS IN LONDON TRY TO MOB CARSON

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, April 4.—Militant suffragetets attempted to project their cause itno the anti Home Rule demonstration of the Unionists in Hyde Park this afternoon, and wild scenes followed.

During the parade of the Anti-Home Rule forces a party of militants led by "General" Flora Drummond, charged into the procession flying banners, scattering suffrage literature and shouting "Votes for women" and "Give us votes before you give Ireland freedom!"

When the police attempted to drive the women from the streets a riot occurred in which a number of persons were injured. Mrs. Drummond was arrested.

The anti-Home Rulers were harassed by both the suffragettes and by male political opponents Liberals and Irish Nationalists hissed the paraders and howled down the speakers.

When Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Unionists, tried to speak at Trafalgar square, a mob surged toward the speakers stand and the police had to charge the crowd to save the speaker. Many women were knocked down by the police.

PELLETIER TO GRILL CHOIR SINGER NAMED IN SIEGEL DIVORCE

"Mrs. Eddy of Boston," named by Mrs. Henry Siegel in her suit for divorce, was today identified as Mrs. Diana Eddy—"Dolly" as she is called by her friends—of No. 33 Parkman street, Dorchester.

Mrs. Eddy has disappeared. District Attorney Pelletier has two detectives watching her home, and others are attempting to trace her, while private detectives from New York are likewise upon the watch for the woman.

WANTS LIGHT ON SIEGEL AFFAIRS.

Mr. Pelletier wants to ask Mrs. Eddy: "Do you know anything about the financial affairs of Henry Siegel? Do you know whether he has any assets concealed from his creditors? Do you know where these concealed assets are?"

And Mr. Pelletier has determined—no matter by what deal immunity for Siegel and Frank E. Vogel may be bought in New York—to push the cases against them to the limit here. Siegel's friends are offering a million and a half to the depositors in the Siegel bank if he is given immunity. But Mr. Pelletier says he will call District Attorney Whitman of New York, Assistant District Attorney Train, Mrs. Siegel and the officers and employes of the New York and Boston stores to get to the bottom of the matter.

WANTED AS GRAND JURY WITNESS.

Mrs. Siegel in her divorce application charges that Mr. Siegel met Mrs. Eddy in Mamaroneck, N. Y., some years ago, and that they have been friends ever since. Mrs. Eddy is the daughter-in-law of the head of the Eddy Refrigerator Company, is wealthy in her own right, but prefers to maintain herself by choir singing and concert work rather than by relying upon the wealth of her husband's family.

Process servers from Mr. Pelletier's office are scouring the city for Mrs. Eddy. He wants her as a witness before the Grand Jury investigating the Siegel Company's affairs. Mrs. Siegel claims that Siegel has secreted huge funds and invested them in securities which are hidden safely away from his creditors. Mr. Pelletier hopes Mrs. Eddy may be able to shed light on this statement.

Mr. Pelletier explained: "We have found that Mrs. Eddy and Mr. Siegel were good friends. We know they saw each other more or less frequently; and it is natural that he should have told her much of his affairs.

"We want to question her about this, and see if she can help us trace the money Mrs. Siegel says is hidden. We want her as a witness and we will get her if persistency can do it."

It is generally reported, however, that Mrs. Eddy is in Providence, and she cannot be forced to return to Boston to testify.

and Inspector Silas F. Waite are in charge of the District Attorney's search for Mrs. Eddy. They have co-operated with New York private detectives in a night-and-day watch over the Eddy home for three days. They believe she will return to see her two children.

Mrs. "Dolly" Eddy is the widow of Robert Eddy. Her father-in-law is Lewis Eddy, head of the refrigerator company. She lives at No. 33 Parkman street; Mr. Lewis Eddy lives at No. 27 Parkman street; Miss Lydia Eddy, a sister of Lewis Eddy, lives at No. 26 Parkman street; and at No. 31 Parkman street lives Lodge Eddy, a brother of Mrs. Eddy's dead husband. The big refrigerator factory founded by Darius Eddy is only a short distance away.

Robert Eddy was a salesman for the Armour Packing Company when he met Mrs. Eddy. She was an English girl, and they were married in England. He brought his bride home with him, but after their two sons were born he died about ten years ago.

Mrs. Eddy left her Dorchester home immediately after the publication of the news of Mrs. Siegel's divorce suit. She left in a closed limousine, and a taxicab preceded her with her baggage—two large steamer trunks, an English traveling bag and a heavy dress suit case.

WENT AWAY IN AUTO.

A young man named James Smith, and whom Mrs. Eddy called "Jack," accompanied her when she left home. He comes from New York, is about twenty-eight years old, tall and dark.

A reporter asked him—when he was seen near the house before Mrs. Eddy left: "Where is Mrs. Eddy?" He replied:

"She has left town. I know nothing of her connection with the Siegel divorce case or any other case. If I did know I would not tell."

Shortly after he entered the Eddy home, and presently he and Mrs. Eddy crossed the back yard from their home to the home of a neighbor. A limousine rolled up to the gate of this neighbor's home. Smith and Mrs. Eddy appeared, jumped in, and in a moment had sped away down the street.

Mrs. Eddy wore a close-fitting suit of gray and a dark, plumed hat. She smiled and talked gayly with Mr. Smith as the limousine wheeled away. And the neighbors watched from their windows with interest.

Mrs. Eddy is a choir-singer, with a remarkable voice; and her earnings from this work have been large. She has sung not only in church choirs, but in social circles, and many times has been a guest at fashionable entertainments in the Back Bay and in New York.

WONDERFULLY ATTRACTIVE.

The story of her acquaintance with Mr. Siegel has nothing in it, according to Mrs. Eddy's intimates, which would even in the slightest degree give countenance to Mrs. Siegel's charges. Apparently they first met when Mrs. Eddy was a soloist in a church at Mamaroneck, N. Y., where is Mr. Siegel's country estate. They did not meet again except in purely social fashion at the homes of mutual friends in Boston and New York, or in connection with church affairs.

Mrs. Eddy is remarkably attractive in appearance, thirty-five years old with two sons—Robert Lewis Eddy and William Abbott Eddy.

Up till a week ago, Mrs. Eddy was a soloist at the Methodist Church in Hyde Park. Mrs. Eddy at once became popular among the church folk. Among her best friends in the choir were Mr. and Mrs. William G. Munn and Charles H. House.

These friends warmly defend Mrs. Eddy. They say she has been victimized. "We saw enough of Mrs. Eddy," Mr. House explained, "to be satisfied that she was a splendid young woman. She won our complete respect. We know—because we know her—that when the thing is sifted down, people will realize Mrs. Eddy has been much maligned."

PRAISED BY FRIENDS.

Another choir member said: "I don't believe it. I know Mrs. Eddy well. Her acquaintance with Mr. Siegel never passed beyond pleasant friendship."

"If you knew Mrs. Eddy," said Mrs. J. P. Chase of No. 12 Bellevue avenue, Dorchester, "you would have to like her. Mrs. Eddy is the sort of woman who naturally wins respect and admiration."

WALSH OPENS CONFERENCE ON CITY PLANNING

The State-wide conference for city and town planning called by Governor Walsh, opened this morning in Ford Hall. Hundreds of delegates from cities and towns throughout the State were in their seats when Chairman John H. Fahey rapped his gavel for order. More than 500 acceptances had been received to Governor Walsh's invitation.

The Governor was a principal speaker during the morning and outlined the plans and purpose of the conference. He dwelt upon the railroad situation at some length, called the railroads the "arteries of commerce" and said that he hoped to see within a year the railroads of Massachusetts reorganized into a well run, well financed and well managed system.

"I trust the work began here," he said, "May prove of inestimable value to Massachusetts. I have invited you to this and possibly other conferences to consult leading experts on the topics of city and town development.

"This is not a plan to beautify your cities and towns, but to get the biggest results for the least expenditure.

"I believe there is a science of city and town development, and I hope this conference may in part arrive at a definition of that science. Massachusetts can hold her place in the forefront only by some such measure, for we are competing with cities in other States which have lower wages, cheaper material, are near natural resources and have a generally lower cost of production.

"To attain results we need skilled men, and to get skilled men we must replace the classical ideals of education by industrial ideals."

HOLD LA FAVE WITHOUT BAIL FOR KILLING 2

George W. LaFave was arraigned in the Peabody court today before Judge Hall for murdering his former sweetheart, twenty-year-old Pearl Mildred Frost, and her employer, Walter P. Hills. He shot them in Hills' home at No. 33 Chestnut street, Peabody, after a quarrel over a diamond ring he had given the girl when they became engaged, but which she had not returned to him when they quarreled.

LaFave, through his attorney, S. Howard Donnell, pleaded not guilty and was held till Tuesday without bail. His girl victim will be buried Sunday from the Methodist Church, and Mr. Hills from his home. An autopsy will be performed today by Medical Examiner Harry K. Foster.

Miss Frost was employed as housekeeper in the Hills' household. She and LaFave were engaged to be married, but a few weeks ago they quarrelled and the engagement was broken off, although she failed to return the diamond ring he had given her.

Hills and Chester B. Brown, a neighbor, were in the house when LaFave called and asked to see Miss Frost. The girl was upstairs in her room and Hills called to her. She came down and walked into the kitchen with LaFave. A few minutes later Hills and Brown heard loud voices and then a shot, followed by a scream, echoed through the house.

GIRL DIES ON THRESHOLD.

The two men dashed for the kitchen. Two more shots were fired as they reached the door. Miss Frost, wounded by three bullets, staggered across the kitchen and fell dead across the threshold of a closet. Hills asked LaFave why he had shot the girl and the latter is said to have pointed the gun at him and fired three more times. Hills sank to the floor mortally wounded.

Brown ran to the police station and told Chief of Police Grady. Patrolmen McManus, O'Connor and Wiggin returned to the house with Brown. McManus remained in front of the house, O'Connor approached a side door, leading into Franklin street, and Wiggin skirted the rear and approached LaFave in the yard.

OVERPOWER LE FAVE.

LaFave warned Wiggin to keep off and started to draw the revolver, which he had reloaded. Wiggin leaped and pinned LaFave's arms to his side before he could draw the weapon. He was quickly overpowered.

LaFave, who was a chauffeur, was born in Portsmouth, N. H., and had lived in Peabody ten years with his wife. Seven years ago Mrs. LaFave died, and their son, who is now ten years old, was sent to live with his sister, Mrs. S. E. Smith of West Somerville, with whom also lives LaFave's mother.

Saturday, May 17, will probably be given to the North End, which is expected to require two days.

The Boston Clean-up and Paint-up Campaign Committee comprises one representative from each of Boston's eleven sanitry districts. These are as follows: District 1, South Boston, Robert M. Bowen; District 2, East Boston, George S. Webster; District 3 Charlestown, Dr. Francis P. Silva; District 4, Brighton and Allston, James H. Dalton; District 5, Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury, Mrs. J. A. O. Ernst; District 6, Dorchester, Mrs. Frank L. Young; District 7, Roxbury, Dr. A. P. Beardsley; District 8, Back Bay, Mrs. Thomas Sherwin; District 9, South End, Calvin Maynard; District 10, North End, Miss Ethel Remele, and District 11, Hyde Park, Francis Darling.

Dry Winter, after All, Says 'Old Prob'

The Weather Bureau says we've had a yard of snow this Winter—or to be exact, 37.4 inches, of which 5.2 inches fell in March. There were sixteen days when rain or snow fell during the month; the total precipitation was 4.16 inches against a normal of 4.08. BUT, for the last three months, the total precipitation was an inch below normal—so we had a dry Winter.

SNEDDEN COMES TO DEFENCE OF CITY SCHOOLS

Mayor James M. Curley's outrageous attempt to hamper and restrict the growth of Boston's schools by cutting $147,000 from their funds for the coming year, has evoked sharp criticism from educators and public spirited men and women.

Men who are in touch with educational advances, with the needs of the schools, and with the ideals which must be applied to school management, either laugh at the Mayor's plan as an "absurdity" and a "second Public Garden scheme," or denounce in unmeasured terms his attempt to find a new supply of patronage with which to weld his political machine.

The school buildings of the city are woefully insufficient. Everywhere there is congestion and the present buildings constantly need repair. That $147,000 Mayor Curley wants to cut off the school fund would come near building a new school that would relieve the congestion.

Dr. David Snedden, commissioner of education in Massachusetts, is one of those who thinks Mayor Curley's plan is simply funny. He calls it "absolutely absurd," and advises the Mayor to study the subject of education before he begins to tamper with the schools. Mayor Curley recommended cutting the high school course to three years, and Dr. Snedden on this point has something to say. He commented:

"It is hard to take Mayor Curley seriously on these points. Any one who knows anything about the advances made in education knows that the tendency is to increase the time in the high schools and decrease it in the grammar schools. This is being done in every country.

"If we are going to retrench let us begin at the right end. Make it seven years in the grammar and five years in the high school.

"It is simply absurd to begin with the high school and work downwards. Any teacher familiar with the methods of modern education feels that high school training is essential. A high school education today is equal to a college education of fifty or more years ago. We must do all within our power to increase the opportunities of education and the expenses of educating the coming generation should never be retrenched.

"Mayor Curley knows that many who leave the grammar schools and go to work avail themselves of the evening schools. Get all the education you can, but get as much as you can out of the curriculum in the high school.

"Mayor Curley can't be taken seriously in this matter. Upon reflection he will see it, if he gets more intimate with educational advances."

BROKEN ROMANCE FOR GIULIA MOROSINI, WHO MARRIED POLICEMAN

Mrs. Arthur N. Werner, formerly Giulia Morosini, heiress to millions, who, it is reported, has separated from her husband.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The romance that was heralded from New York to the Pacific Ocean in 1911, when Miss Giulia Morosini, heiress of the Morosini millions, married Arthur N. Werner, a mounted policeman who heroically saved her life, has been wrecked according to a story printed in an evening paper today.

It says that the young couple have separated and that armed detectives have been placed about Elmhurst, the beautiful palace built at Riverdale, to prevent Werner entering. The detectives were engaged by Mrs. Werner.

ELOPED THIRTY YEARS AGO.

The differences between the couple are said to have arisen from visits Werner is reported to have paid to his first wife, from whom he was divorced not long before he married Miss Morosini.

Mrs. Werner's older sister, Victoria, eloped thirty years ago with the Morosini coachman, Ernest H. Schilling. Her father disowned her, but after the girl, weary of poverty, appealed to him, he arranged for her to leave Schilling. At last report she was living on a modest allowance in Rutland, Vt., under the name of Marie Baldwin.

Now the younger sister's romance is shattered, if the present report be well founded. Appearances at Riverdale indicate domestic trouble.

At each of the two gates leading into the grounds at Elmhurst a detective was stationed today. Four others were camped in the house. It was stated there that Mrs. Werner had gone to Florida, but some of her friends declared that she was still living at Elmhurst while her attorneys were making preparations to file suit for divorce.

MARRIED RESCUER.

Miss Morosini married four years after he had saved her life. During the previous four years he had been employed as a superintendent on the $7,000,000 Morosini estate. The girl's father, the late Giovanni P. Morosini, gave him this position out of gratitude for his heroic action.

Before her marriage Mrs. Morosini had been reported to be engaged to several titled foreigners and the announcement that she had married the former policeman made society gasp. Werner was divorced by his wife only a few months before he married Miss Morosini. She accused him of abandoning her in 1907. It was in that year that Werner saved his future bride's life.

TORIES PLAY WITH POWDER, SAYS GALVIN

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Tomorrow, Sunday, the Tories of London are going to hold a great demonstration in Hyde Park against home rule in Ireland. It will be a vast gathering. Monday morning's papers will teem with graphic stories of the loud protest of the great metropolis against the home rule bill.

It would not be surprising if, without exaggeration, the Tory managers can boast to the world on Monday that half a million people were on the park and around their platforms.

Hyde Park on a Sunday in Spring is the easiest place in the universe to get together a vast assemblage. It is also the most dangerous.

London swarms with anarchists, Socialists of the extremest Continental type, cranks of every conceivable grade and tens upon tens of thousands of unemployed, who, homeless and foodless, are filled with hatred of all organized society and of all constituted government.

The one place where all these multitudes of discontent gravitate towards on every fine Sunday is Hyde Park.

THOUSANDS GATHER.

There, on the expansive swards, this army of wretchedness—the most appalling of all problems before English statesmen today—sleeps on the benches or dozes on the grass, trying to forget its hunger. When awake its members wonder in sheer droves through the park, listening to speeches from scores of rostrums made by clever orators, itinerant though they are, who hold forth by the hour on almost every subject under the sun.

The church, the government, the capitalist, the man who owns a house or runs a store, the employer, all come in for their dose of denunciation from those able and eloquent expounders of human rights in Hyde Park every Sunday.

Once in a while there is variety, it comes about general election time usually, when the big political parties hold demonstrations in support of their respective policies.

SERVE A PURPOSE.

Then the awful and depressing "submerged tenth" as the late General Booth called them in his book, "In Darkest London," swarms around the score or more of platforms, listening to the campaign speeches of members of both houses of parliament as they vigorously denounce their opponents and laud their own party to the skies. Such meetings do no harm. In fact they have a certain service. They act as safety valves in times of popular excitement.

But there are times when such gatherings are mighty perilous amusements for the titled and aristocratic Tory. He may stir up passions and arouse forces that have a terrible recoiling power. Then the Tory class hears some thunder. The young Tories of today do not remember, perhaps, the fearful results of the Sunday meeting held in Trafalgar Square in 1886, when some incendiaries shouted, "Let us loot the shops," and for a whole afternoon, through miles of the business streets of London surged a smashing, destroying throng of rioters too large for several hours for the police and military to handle.

Tomorrow the Lord Lansdownes, the Duke of Abercorns, the Carsons, the Smiths, the Cecils and the Bonar Laws will hurl torrents of invective against Premier Asquith and the home rule ministry.

It will be a great coming together of the upper and the nether millstones. The netted earls, the dainty countesses, the haughty dukes, the aristocratic primrose dames of Belgravia will try to make common cause with "the great masses"—all to beat Asquith and home rule.

HAZARDOUS GAME.

It will be a hazardous game to play in these days of unrest upon the passions of the discontented and morose thousands, who will gather in that park tomorrow.

But the Tories are now desperate and don't care. That cry they have given to democratic England of "The Army or the People," will wipe them off the political map at the next elections.

Two things the Tories should remember in their bitter fight against home rule. They are:

First, it may be an easy and a congenial task to lift the sluices which hold back the passions of an unthinking, angry mob. It is not so easy to slip those sluices back into place once the flood is rushing at full head.

Second, it was a wise philosopher who said: "Those whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

There may be an aftermath to the story of tomorrow in Hyde Park.

Brier Speaks at 5 Crowded Rallies

Large crowds at five rallies greeted Frank L. Brier, Republican candidate for Congress, in his tour of the Twelfth District. Patrick Kelly of Michigan also aroused enthusiasm at every meeting.

ASQUITH WARNS ARMY TO KEEP OUT OF POLITICS

LADYBANK, Scotland, April 4.—Premier Asquith opened his campaign for re-election to Parliament here today with a ringing speech in which he attacked the Unionist party, and at the same time pledged the complete separation of the army from politics.

In addressing the electors of Fife, whom he represented in the House of Commons for many years, the Premier touched only briefly on the events leading to his acceptance of the portfolio of war in the cabinet, but said that his action was taken for the interests of the State and army. Then he made this significant declaration:

"But the army will hear nothing of politics from me. In return I expect to hear nothing of politics from the army."

The audience cheered this declaration which was a reiteration of the Premier's statement in Parliament that the army must obey orders without asking guarantees.

At that point the Premier took occasion to assail the Unionists, asserting their attempt to wreck the government was based upon a theory in which none of them had any real belief. "The doctrine lately promulgated by the Tories," he said "struck not only at the root of army discipline, but also at the root of democratic government."

The Premier was given an enthusiastic reception when he arrived here. A general holiday was declared, all work was suspended and the schools were closed that the children might join in the ceremonies of welcome.

Galvin to Speak to O'Connell Branch

Daniel O'Connell Branch, United Irish League, will hold a meeting tomorrow evening in Appleton Hall. C. O'Connell Galvin will speak on the present crisis of the British Parliament and the future prospects of Ireland under home rule. Thomas O'Loughlin, vice-president of the Timothy Leary Branch of Waltham will speak on the achievements of the Irish Parliamentary party. Michael F. O'Malley, president of the branch, will preside.

Dr. Charles H. Holbrook of Lynn, Mass., a missionary at Soushehir, was released today, having established his innocence. Four other persons will be tried April 18. The official version is that Dr. Holbrook was shot in mistake for an Armenian.

Cole Claims Curley Errs in Statement

"It is with considerable diffidence that I feel obliged to point out to the Mayor that he is again mistaken," said former Fire Commissioner Cole today. "He says that in my 1912-1913 report I recommended 'a new station should be built on the site of Chemical Company 3, Winthrop street, Charlestown, for a new engine company.' I did not make that recommendation."

Believe Woman Was Burned in Furnace

TWO CITIES IN HUNT FOR LOST HARLOWE GIRL

On a telephone message that Laura B. Harlowe, the missing Dorchester girl, has been seen in Quincy, Captain Michael Crowley of the Dorchester police today asked the Quincy police to join in the search for the lost girl.

She disappeared Tuesday evening and was last seen taking a Neponset car. Now the police believe she may have walked across the bridge into Quincy. A systematic search of the Dorchester and Neponset districts is meanwhile in progress.

Phone reports pour into the police since the girl's disappearance. Late yesterday some one sent word that the girl was at home, but when Special Officer Patrick J. Williams hurried to the house he found it a false alarm.

Secret information to the police today led them to abandon the suicide theory and they renewed their search with new energy.

What they have learned has not been made public, but it is intimated the girl is alive and will probably return to her home at No. 73 Southern avenue, Dorchester, within the next few days.

Motorman John Tarr is certain he saw Miss Harlowe on Wednesday afternoon at Welles and Dorchester avenues, as he was on his outward trip toward Ashmont and Milton. After a brief wait at the barn, he returned on an inward bound car, and she was still standing there, fully a half hour elapsing in the meantime. She then boarded his car in the direction of Fields Corner.

But, he adds, she was attired in a brown suit, with short coat, an entirely different costume from that worn away from her place of employment, Marshall's bakery, at No. 1833 Dorchester avenue, Tuesday evening. She then had on a gray skirt, shirtwaist and black plush coat of full length.

His assertion is strengthened by the statement of a young woman working in a Dorchester avenue news store, to the effect that she is quite sure of having seen Miss Harlowe about 1:45 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, coming along King street, from Neponset avenue, and going in the direction of Dorchester avenue.

MRS. WHEELER SEIZES $5,000 FOR ALIMONY

Mrs. Claudia Carlstadt Wheeler, the "best dressed woman in America," has located $5,000 worth of her husband's securities in Boston. They are held by Richardson, Hill & Company, bankers, No. 50 Congress street.

An attachment for the face value was placed on them by Attorney Sherman L. Whipple, one of the sixteen lawyers working for Mrs. Wheeler.

Suit will be entered next week. Mrs. Wheeler is hunting in a dozen large cities for property owned by "Bertie" Wheeler, from whom she was separated in New York two years ago.

She claims the securities discovered here are exactly the amount he owes in back alimony. She has the aid of the ablest lawyers and detectives in the quest for Albert G. Wheeler's holdings.

Attachments are made as quickly as securities are found. Mrs. Wheeler made the charge today that her husband has transferred his holdings to friends temporarily, in order to foil her.

She also charged that "Bertie," in scooping up his belongings after the separation, took valuables which she personally owned, among them heirlooms and gifts from her parents and relatives.

She said she found that J. B. Russell & Company, New York bankers, still carry an account for her husband. Mrs. Wheeler's hunt for her husband's scattered holdings is one of the strangest and most spectacular ever waged by an American woman. She caught one fleeting glimpse of "Bertie" here, but he vanished before constables could reach him. He is now thought to be in a State near Massachusetts.

Rough-Rider's Test Proves Schuiling Rupture Lock

Montana Rancher Tells How Wonderful Invention Enabled Him to Overcome Terrible Ruptures.

George B. Houliston is a daring rider of wild horses. He lives on a ranch at Van, Montana, where life is strenuous.

Some years ago he was seriously ruptured on both sides.

Mr. Houliston feared that meant the end of his usefulness on the thrilling work of the ranch. The saddle was a torture to him in his serious condition and every minute on horseback was a gamble with life.

He put on the Schuiling Rupture Lock one day after a futile trial of various trusses and similar devices. The Schuiling Rupture Lock worked. It felt comfortable.

He jumped on his horse, battled the bucking beast, subdued him and galloped away to the range.

It seemed too good to be true. For seven months he tested the Schuiling Rupture Lock under these trying conditions. It met every test and proved true and perfect. Then Mr. Houliston wrote a letter in which he said:

GIVES IT "WILD WEST" TEST.

"It is not possible to speak too highly of your wonderful rupture lock, for I was badly ruptured on both sides and was never able to find a suitable article that would give me relief from the constant misery that I had to endure.

"I have worn your rupture lock for about seven months, under the hardest kind of test, such as heavy lifting, jumping, straining myself handling horses, rough horseback riding and many other ways, and never in one instance did it fail me, which I must say is very remarkable.

"I presume I am cured, but will take no chances in taking it off, on account of my very rough work. I will be pleased to recommend it to all who wish to know more about your wonderful invention."

The experience of Mr. Houliston is proof positive of the safety and effectiveness of the Schuiling Rupture Lock.

When a "rough-rider" with a double rupture gets relief as Mr. Houliston did any rupture sufferer, man, woman or child, can be sure that the Schuiling Rupture Lock will give satisfaction under any demands that may be put upon it.

The Schuiling Rupture Lock is the most important invention since the treatment of rupture began.

Rupture sufferers have been robbed for years by men who make trusses, worthless devices made only to "sell." The Schuiling Rupture Lock is made to use.

RUPTURE IS A LIFE BURDEN.

You have doubtless been disappointed and discouraged by the rosy promises and seductive statements of all kinds of rupture quacks. You perhaps have tried many trusses and torturing devices that gave no satisfaction. Meanwhile, the handicap of rupture remained.

It has been a burden on your life and work that you have been unable to throw off.

But this announcement brings you honest assurance that you can get real relief.

The Schuiling Rupture Lock will cure rupture.

You can put on the Schuiling Rupture Lock and throw your truss away forever.

USE PROVES RESULTS.

The Schuiling Rupture Lock has been tested and proven by results that have stood for years. Results are proven by hundreds of cases. People in all kinds of occupations, from "desk jobs" to the hazardous labors of the frontier, declare it has relieved and cured them.

You can get the Schuiling Rupture Lock for thirty days' free trial. In that time we know that it will prove itself to you. You assume no risk whatever—and we have so much confidence that we know we are taking no risk at all. You will certainly want it. You will know at once that you cannot afford to be without it.

It does not matter what has failed before. The Schuiling Rupture Lock is a wonderful invention that eliminates the possibility of danger. It will save the rupture sufferer from dangerous operations. It will cure rupture. It brings the ruptured parts together with a firm but gentle pressure, under just the right conditions for nature to complete the cure.

COMFORTABLE TO WEAR.

The Schuiling Rupture Lock is simple in construction and comfortable to wear. It avoids acute pressure on pubic bone, hips or spine. It has no unsanitary leg bands, elastics, springs or steel stays and metal bands. The lock is free in its action, yet absolutely sure and safe.

Our book on rupture explains in detail all the wonderful features of this remarkable invention. This book will be sent free at your request on the next mail.

Read here what some of the many who have used the Schuiling Rupture Lock write about it:

"CURED AT 81 YEARS."

John Schinnerer of Columbus, Ind. writes:

"I was fitted with the Schuiling Rupture Lock four months ago and now find that the ruptured openings are entirely healed up. I am 81 years old and never expected a cure at my age."

"WORE IT 8 MONTHS; CURED."

Edward E. Dickerson, Prescott and S. Division St., Grand Rapids, Mich., writes:

"I had been ruptured for years—had worn all kinds of trusses and appliances, but all to no avail until your lock was tried. It held my rupture as nothing before had done. Wore it eight months and was completely cured."

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION.

Mrs. Catherine Sottong of Brooksville, Ind., writes:

"I had been a rupture sufferer for a long time, and it was getting so bad that I could not drag myself around the house any more; it was as large as two fists; was all bent over with pain; never could get anything to keep it up. My doctor and lots of other physicians said that I must have an operation to do me any good, but I was afraid and put it off, hoping that I might some day find some kind of an article that would help me. Now I am glad that I waited, for at last I heard of the Schuiling Rupture Lock. I ordered one to try and, sure enough, it held my rupture right from the very first, and now I am cured and only wore it five months."

The Schuiling Rupture Lock is the thing for you.

'THE FORCE' A NOVEL ADDITION TO CRIME PLAYS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It's a poor play in these advanced times that doesn't give some of its attention to crime, crooks and policemen. No matter how you look at it, policemen and their species are very much in fashion in the drama. It was that way at the Plymouth yesterday afternoon when A. E. Thomas' new play, "The Force," gave you a glimpse of the corruption that civic moralists have been telling you is demoralizing the New York police department. It was a plain case of police graft from the rise of the curtain, and the big special matinee audience absorbed it with an enthusiasm that has seldom been seen in a local theatre.

Mr. Thomas' play had the added distinction of being acted by a company that would have carried any kind of dramatic entertainment to a very successful finish. No play of recent years has been turned over to safer hands for interpretation and the result yielded its own glory to the anxious playwright.

"The Force" found a friendly audience awaiting it—friendly because it was well known that the cream of the "Under Cover" and "Within the Law" companies now playing at the Plymouth and Majestic Theatres were to give it the benefit of an extraordinary acting skill and because everybody likes to believe that the New York policeman is his legitimate prey. There was no mistaking what Mr. Thomas intended to do to the New York policeman.

PLAY WAS ENTERTAINING.

There could be no question that "The Force" was made unusually attractive by the character of the cast. Almost any play would look like an established dramatic triumph with such a backing. But there was a measure of novelty in the author's scheme of taking you behind the scenes in police graft and letting you view the proceedings from the inside. The play was interesting and entertaining—it was built around sound dramatic characters and was a rather faithful picture of human nature—at its worst.

From the long list of very excellent people who made light work of the burdens, Margaret Wycherly was the most commanding—and most artistic. Miss Wycherly, in the role of an aged and rather enfeebled mother, sister and widow of different policemen, impressed herself upon her audience as but few players have done. She was a cheerful old lady carrying a heavy load of hidden sorrow. Her philosophy had a ring to it that carried conviction, and the plain honesty of her quaint humor turned every face into smiles.

Orme Caldara, as a young but foolish policeman, gave a splendid characterization and Wilton Taylor, as a grafting police captain, sounded almost too true to be safe. William Courtenay was a polished district attorney with all the grace of bearing and agreeable elocution that has kept him at the top of his profession, and William B. Mack, in one brief scene, swept his audience off its feet with an intensely human and sympathetic touch.

GOOD MELODRAMA.

"The Force" was good melodrama of police graft, acted in a fashion that could not have failed to impress everyone who saw it. While many thrills of the modern melodrama were missing, there were, nevertheless, several gripping moments. But it did make a bad mess of the New York police department, which is always a popular subject for scornful treatment.

"The Force" was a new and novel contribution to the drama of crime and graft.

LAW BROKEN IN BANK CHOICES, FORBES FINDS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The politicians who selected the reserve bank cities flagrantly violated both the letter and the spirit of the new national currency act. The first duty of the Federal Reserve Board probably will be to undo what has been done.

If President Wilson chooses experts and not politicians for the Reserve Board sweeping changes will be certainly made at once, according to information conveyed privately.

* * *

The whole country may even be redivided into only eight districts, and neither John Skelton Williams' home city, Richmond, nor Colonel House's favored Dallas, is likely to be signaled for honors denied much more important centres. Nor will Secretary Houston's home State, Missouri, receive two of the coveted banks.

* * *

Has the currency act been violated? Read what it says:

"The districts shall be apportioned with due regard to the convenience AND CUSTOMARY COURSE OF BUSINESS."

* * *

Jersey City's principal institutions are affiliated with the New York Clearing House, and practically ALL the financial business of that city, as well as of Newark, Paterson and other Jersey towns, is done, not through Philadelphia, but through New York.

Yet in the futile effort to spite New York all these places, though within a few minutes of the metropolis, are ordered to tear up their long-established arrangements by the roots and transplant them in the Quaker city.

* * *

No one, of course, can pretend that this is having "due regard to the convenience and customary course of business."

The law has been palpably violated for petty, partisan, parish pump political reasons. But even Washington cannot force water to run up hill.

* * *

President Wilson's standing, it was freely conceded to, has been seriously hurt by the extraordinary tactics of his Reserve Board Organization Committee.

Jersey City is peculiarly bitter over its mistreatment, while Connecticut cities, New Orleans, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Omaha and other places are also up in arms, claiming that for questionable political reasons they have not been treated with "due regard" to the present course of their financial and business operations.

* * *

Said one banker of note:

"The politicians have been enjoying a go-as-you-please in inaugurating the new currency system. The time is near when bankers and business men will talk over the work. Their first concern will be to wipe out much that the politicians have done—or tried to do—."

* * *

That program, the prospects today are, will be followed, to the advantage of the whole country—save, perhaps, the wire pullers who have had matters all their own way heretofore.

SOME DONT'S

For Stomach and Liver Sufferers

Don't take medicine for your Stomach ailments morning, noon and night, as usually such medicines only give temporary relief and simply digest the food that happens to be in the stomach.

Don't permit a surgical operation. There is always serious danger in operations, and in many cases of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal ailments the knife can be avoided if the right remedy is taken in time.

Don't go around with a foul smelling breath caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver to the discomfort of all whom you come in contact with.

If you are a Stomach sufferer don't think you cannot be helped; probably worse cases than yours have been restored by Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy.

Most Stomach ailments are mainly caused by a catarrhal condition. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy not only removes the catarrhal mucus, but allays the chronic inflammation and assists in rendering the entire alimentary and intestinal tract antiseptic, and this is the secret of its marvelous success.

More Cash Needed to Build Wireless for Archie Thomas

Archie Thomas' friends are still sending subscriptions to increase his fund, but only one-half the sum needed is at hand today. Archie's apparatus will cost more than was at first estimated, as he will need a small electric power plant to operate it.

Read the Sunday AMERICAN for a full account of the committee of high class wireless experts who will purchase and instal the plant on Penikese Island and other interesting details.

The following letter is indicative of a large number being received every day by the AMERICAN:

> Archie Thomas Wireless Fund:
>
> Inclosed please find $1. Even this small sum means a lot to me, as I am in poor circumstances myself. But when I think of that poor unfortunate boy, isolated from humanity for the rest of his life, I feel I must buck up and send $1. However, I believe I shall find some joy in knowing that on Penikese Island there is a poor unfortunate soul who is receiving some little happiness partly procured through my little dollar.
>
> But one question I would like to ask. What is the trouble today with society, with a country that has its millionaires and multimillionaires that it should require weeks to secure a trifling sum for a fated boy.?

Great Britain to Send Exhibits for Panama Exposition

LONDON, April 4.—It is reported that the government has found a way to participate officially in the Panama Exposition at comparatively small cost. The plan is to send to San Francisco the arts and crafts exhibits which were shown at Ghent last year. The cost, it is declared, will not exceed $500,000, instead of $1,250,000, the amount originally estimated for an official exhibit, against which the government balked.

With an official participation of this kind it is certain that many firms and individuals will send exhibits who otherwise would remain out.

Find Protection Doors Opened at South Boston Fire

Firemen who fought the flames last night in the big South Boston shoe establishment of the W. H. McElwain Company, Nos. 348-358 Congress street, which did a damage of 125,000, declared today that the fire protection doors on each floor of the structure were found open. Under the law the doors are supposed to be closed. The matter was reported to Chief McDonough.

"Yes, it's true the firemen who entered the building to put out the fire found the fire doors open," said Chief McDonough. "Why they were left open I cannot say. That was what accounted for the spread of the flames. It was a tough fight for the men of the department. They deserve great praise for the manner in which they handled it."

There were three alarms and several big warehouses in the district were threatened.

Suspect Lawson in Fun-Making Plea on $6,000,000 Bonds

State Street brokers were wondering today who was the unknown humorist—Thomas W. Lawson is suspected—who sent to a leading bond house a frankly fun-making circular describing a proposed bond issue of $6,000,000. It read:

"$6,000,000. The Average Gas, Brass & Scoop Company. Last mortgage sick per cent. Serious Old Bonds. Interest payable Thanksgiving and Memorial Days. Authorized Issue, $6,000,000; Outstanding, $12,000,000. Jesse James, Trustee."

BUSINESS NOW AHEAD OF 1913, SAYS ROTHWELL

"There is no need of a bread line in Boston. Most industries in New England are thriving, instead of being hard hit by dull times, as some persons believe," was the prosperity note sounded by Bernard J. Rothwell, ex-president of the Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the State Commission on Immigration, at a meeting of the Twentieth Century Club to consider the report of the State Commission on "The Problem of Immigration in Massachusetts."

Mr. Rothwell said savings banks are growing and said business men in New England called conditions better than a year ago.

"I know that my own business is 33 per cent. better," he declared.

PART II.

CHAPTER I.

The three thousand dollars that Fraser got from Sager at the crushing rate of interest passed only a little less quickly than the three months within which he had agreed to pay it—pay it double.

The very day when it came due a gentle reminder from Sager came to him in the mail.

The next day came this:

"Frank Fraser:

"I told you I could not wait for that note. If it is not paid within forty-eight hours I shall be obliged to take legal measures for collecting it. A. SAGER."

Fraser went to see the loan broker.

"You know you are a fool to try to deal with me like that," he said. "I haven't anything in the world but my name and my coming marriage. Why can't you wait for the marriage? Haven't you read in the papers—I know mighty well you have—that it is to take place in three weeks? Don't you know that's your only chance of getting your money?"

"I don't think your marriage will take place in three weeks," said Sager. "I guess you don't read the papers yourself, Mr. Fraser. I guess you don't see, perhaps, this morning's article of Mr. Richards' sickness."

"Sickness?"

"A stroke of some kind—yesterday That will postpone your marriage—what?"

"I must hurry to Elmwold. I didn't know of it. Meanwhile, you play the only sensible game—keep quiet and wait."

"I give you the three weeks; then I go to court," said Sager, with his putty voice and iron meaning.

CHAPTER II.

"Oh, you have come at last!" cried Dorothy, as Fraser leaped from the motor. "What could have kept you so long?"

"My dearest one, I didn't know of it until half an hour ago. I had neglected to read the papers. I have a thousand apologies to make—when I have done what I can for you and for your father."

"Oh, it is good to have you here," she sobbed.

He kissed away her tears as gently as one who really loved might have done. "Is it very serious?" he asked.

"The doctors will not tell me. That is why I know it must be serious," she said. "He has worked so hard the last year. He would never give over any of the things that he was accustomed to do. He would never let himself be an old man. He did not realize that he had made a hermit of himself—even here at beautiful Elmwold. He worked here just as he worked in town.

"He was writing last night in the study when I heard something—something fall. I ran in. He was on the floor there beside his desk. He could scarcely breathe. It took an hour to get a doctor. Now the house is full of them, but none of them will tell me what it is. They will tell you, dear. Oh, it is good you are come."

CHAPTER III.

For three weeks the world of finance waited breathlessly, day by day, the bulletins from the bedside of Leon Richards. For three weeks the most eminent physicians of America consulted at Elmwold.

It was not apoplexy, they were sure, but the case mystified them. It seemed to be a complete nervous breakdown from overwork that still left the vitality of the master mind unimpaired.

Leon Richards sent for a young doctor from the West—a man he had heard of, whose career he had watched as he watched all remarkable careers.

* * *

Another week passed. The reports of Leon Richards' condition became more and more serious. Fraser was almost constantly at the house. The marriage had been indefinitely postponed.

Fraser was engaged in a running battle of letters with Sager, who was hotly demanding his money now.

The tangled webs were growing in their crushing strength. As the fortune won had vanished in a moment at the gaming table, the fortune he hoped to win through his marriage seemed to be on the verge of vanishing.

CHAPTER IV.

One day Sager went so far as to send a note to Elmwold for Fraser.

"You have one day more to pay," it said.

Fraser crumpled it in his hand, for he had been talking with Dorothy when the messenger brought it. His face turned livid.

"What is it?" cried the girl. "Bad news for you, too? Tell me."

"Nothing at all—a little business matter. I was annoyed that they should send a message here," he announced, instantly recovering his composure.

But he paced the garden in desperation for an hour afterward.

He returned to the house by the side entrance, which was seldom used. It led directly to Mr. Richards' study.

Some impulse of retreat led Fraser to open the study door. He walked in.

The room was just as the financier had left when he was stricken at his work. Papers heaped the desk. Fraser ran his lithe fingers through them. He chanced to uncover a check book.

To the debased mind—the mind cultured in trickery—there comes no temptation. Temptation comes only to the innocent. To tear a blank check from Leon Richards' check book was instinctive, mechanical, to Fraser. He did not hesitate for an instant. To him the discovery came as an inspiration.

The next day—the limit day that he had set for the payment of the note—Anton Sager received a check for $6,000 signed with one of the greatest and surest names in the world of business.

The tangled webs seemed to loosen around Frank Fraser.

CHAPTER V.

The young doctor from the West continued his treatment in the face of the determined opposition of the New York surgeons.

He won.

To the astonishment of the famous failures, Leon Richards left his bed.

Convalescent, he even took an hour a day of "recreation," as he smilingly called it, at his work. The news flashed to the financial centres of the world that the man who was known as the bulwark of New York credit would soon be well.

Only Frank Fraser trembled at the news.

Mr. Richards found that a check was missing strangely, from one of his books. He trusted his servants absolutely, but he was a man of strict method. He notified his bankers immediately. Among the checks returned to him his secretary found one for $6,000 made out to Anton Sager.

The wedding plans were going forward. The recovery of Mr. Richards caused the happy day to be set again. Dorothy was busy with her preparations. Fraser was a daily visitor, as ever. But on the day before the wedding day he was followed from Elmwold by three detectives.

"If I can hold through till tomorrow—just till tomorrow," he muttered to himself, as he sank, almost faint, against the cushions of his motor car. "Once married they will be ashamed to prosecute me."

As he left the car, the detectives left theirs a few yards behind. He started to walk briskly up the avenue. One of the men approached him.

"You are wanted——"

That was all Fraser heard. The nervous strain he had been under for weeks had riven his nerves. There was no strength left in him. Panic seized him. He ran.

Like a common thief he dodged into the area of a brownstone house. He tried the door. It was locked. The beat of footsteps sounded near. He whipped out a revolver from his pocket and fired a bullet through his heart.

If the webs of Fate could have been tangled only a little more, only a little longer; but who shall guide the tangled webs of Fate?

A Happy Bald Headed Man

Well-Known Politician, Nearly Bald, Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe, which any lady or gentleman can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."

JOE EAGAN IS GIVEN AWARD OVER JOHNNY GLOVER AFTER CLOSE BOUT AT NEPTUNE A. C.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

LOCAL SEVENS TO CLASH IN FINAL ICE BATTLE HUB CITY TITLE TONIGHT

EAGAN TAKES SIZZLING BOUT FROM GLOVER

By RINGSIDE.

Twelve fast, furious rounds saw Joe Eagan get a well deserved decision over Johnny Glover at the opening professional show of the Neptune A. C. last night. From start to finish the battle was a sizzler, both men, with the knowledge of past scores to settle, tearing in and fighting for keeps.

Glover opened up like a whirlwind and in the first round assaulted Eagan with an array of steamy left and right swings that had the former lightweight somewhat dizzy. Again in the second round Johnny had the edge, though Eagan began to find himself and started to return some of the punishment.

Eagan began to come fast in the third, and from then on had things pretty much his own way, though Glover was always willing to keep boring in persistently. He showed at his best in the ninth and tenth rounds, and made such a hit that when Referee Moore awarded Eagan the verdict there was considerable hissing. Glover lost his head for a moment and made a pass at the referee as he stepped out of the ring, but when he realized what he had done, quickly apologized.

The winner really took the fight in the last session. With the bell he rushed out and hammered Glover in the midriff with hot right smashes, occasionally sending a tantalizing left jab to the face.

This left jab was one of Eagan's strongest standbys during the entire fight, and even in the rounds when Glover was going strongest, it was generally in his way and stopped many a fine rally that promised to end the fight in short order.

Though Eagan was given the decision, the friends of his opponent are still of the opinion that he is the better fighter, and doubtless another match will be arranged between the pair.

Two preliminaries were staged before the main bout, Joe Coes forcing Henry Morley to quit in four rounds, and Terry Smalley getting the verdict from Kid McDonald after six rounds of good free slugging.

A rather small crowd watched the bouts, but there was plenty of excitement, especially during the big affair. The club will not hold a show next week, but will get busy again the week following. The card will be announced later.

Between Rounds

By RINGSIDE

Freddy Duffy of Jamaica Plain is out with a sweeping defi to either Matty Baldwin or Eddie Murphy and is so anxious to take on either one that he is willing to sign up for a bout on the winner take all basis. Murphy has asked Duffy to make 135 pounds ringside for him and this Duffy says he would be glad to do, provided he was sure Murphy would then come to terms. A battle with either Baldwin or Murphy against the Jamaica Plain chap would be a splendid drawing card for any New England organization.

* * *

Murphy has been laying off lately owing to a bad hand, but this has now healed completely, according to Eddie's manager, and the matter of arranging a bout should not cause much trouble.

* * *

Baldwin has never been backward about boxing anybody, and a few pounds difference in weight will never cause any dallying on the part of the Charlestown Bearcat. So that, all in all, it would seem that Mr. Duffy's fondest hopes could very easily be realized, if he's sincere in what he says.

* * *

Duffy is in good condition now and his next appearance in the ring will be at Augusta, Me., on the 15th. His opponent that night will be Terry Brooks, and the pair should make a very interesting team.

* * *

Leach Cross, the New York dentist pugilist, will very likely settle out on the Coast until he ends his fighting career. "Leach" who is a big favorite on the Western circuit, finds it rather wearing to be jumping back and forth across the country every few months.

When leaving for Vernon the other day to prepare for his bout with the English champion, Freddie Welsh on April 28, "Leach" announced to the friends who had come to see him off that he was not coming back.

The fact that he took his wife and daughter on the journey lends weight to the belief that the New York lightweight meant what he said.

* * *

When he signed up to get $10,000 for boxing 10 rounds with Charlie White at Milwaukee on May 8, champion Willie Ritchie knew that he wasn't running much risk of losing his title.

In such a short bout, the champion's experience should easily enable him to get through without a lot of trouble. Wise Willie has the option of taking 40 per cent of the gate receipts as his end if he wishes.

* * *

Prior to getting together with such a tough battler as Johnny Dundee, champion Johnny Kilbane will take on Gene Delmont at Memphis, Tennessee on Monday night.

This bout will act as a tryout for the little star, who still fears he has not yet fully recovered from his recent attack of tonsilitis.

* * *

Kid Williams will also get into action Monday night, going 6 rounds with "Louisiana" a Philadelphia negro at the Olympic A. C., Philadelphia.

Williams has a championship engagement listed for June 9, on which date he will meet Johnny Conlon at Vernon. Williams will engage in several other short battles in the East before setting out for his training camp on the Coast.

* * *

Johnny Dundee added another engagement to his long list yesterday by signing up to battle Knockout Brown at the National Sporting Club, New York, April 16. Dundee is about the busiest fighter in the country these days.

COBB TELLS VALUE OF A BASEBALL JOB

Written for the Boston American.

By TY COBB.

There are certain natural qualifications required of a man before he can make good in the Big Leagues. A boy cannot start out and say he is going to be a star ball player or even a Big Leaguer as he can make up his mind to become a doctor or a lawyer.

A man with any sort of a physique can be a physician or lawyer, but the ball player must have a good physique.

Most men enter the profession through an accident, or rather luck. They play ball with amateurs and are picked up by a minor league team. Then some scout gets his eyes on the prospect, and he is taken South for a trial.

That is the turning point in the lives of all prospective big leaguers, because then they either must show or go back. Most of them turn back.

A doctor or a lawyer is usually in debt when he first starts out in his chosen profession, because, after years of preparation, the business of building up a practice and inspiring confidence is slow.

Baseball Is a Healthy Business.

A ball player gets good money from the jump and is not in debt as a rule. Baseball is a healthy business, and there are the best conditioned men in the game, if you take the average, that there are in any business in the world, or sport either, for that matter.

It is much better for a man physically than prize fighting, because it is not so strenuous and does not require such vigorous training. It is played outdoors and fighters, as a rule, work inside.

Baseball does not strain a man as fighting or rowing or running does. When a man has good health, he is generally pretty happy even if he has not formed a trust and cornered some necessity of life and even if he is not doling it out at so much per dole.

Many men come into the major leagues without having had the opportunity to collect much education. I never went to college myself, although I expect to send my son when he reaches the proper age. Many of the ambitious ones go to college in the Winter and use the money they have earned in the Summer to get something which they could not afford when younger.

Played Ball and Went to College.

Neither John McGraw or Hugh Jennings had much educaton when they started playing baseball. Both went to St. Bonaventure College while they were with the Baltimore club, and the faculty in that institution is responsible for the statement that there never were two harder students thain McGraw and Jennings, and that it wishes it could get a couple of big leaguers to attend each Winter, since the other students naturally admired the famous players and tried to imitate them, as is natural.

The result was that the student average was much higher at St. Bonaventure while Jennings and McGraw attended.

Jenings went to the Cornell law school later and was admitted to the bar in Pennsylvania, where he practices in the Winter. He also dived into the swimming tank at Cornell one day when there was no water in it and cracked his head on the tile bottom.

The tank was so full of steam that Hugh did not know the water had been drained. For a time it looked as though Detroit was going to be forced to dig up a new manager, but Jennings finally came around.

"That's no way to kill me," said Jennings afterwards. "You've got to do something else beside try to break my neck, and I've got some ball players who would have broken the tile bottom if they landed on their heads."

Ty Cobb will give an interesting account of "Big Money in the Big Leagues" in the Boston Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow.

PILGRIM AND I. A. A. A. SEVENS WIND UP SERIES

In what is expected to be one of the hardest fought games ever played in Boston, the Irish-American A. A. and the Pilgrim A. A. will battle in the seventh and deciding contest of their series tonight at the Arena.

The teams have each won three games and this contest will wind up the series and also the hockey season in Boston. The Pilgrims have scored five more goals than the Irish-Americans, but the "Winged Shield" seven is not only confident of taking tonight's game but also of scoring a sufficient number of goals to win the series.

Wolly, the former Melrose High School player, who took Bates' place at left wing for the I. A. A. A. on Wednesday, caging two of the three goals made by his team, will again be seen at left wing tonight.

"Mickie" Roach, the English High School star, will play rover for the Pilgrims and the sending of this youngster into the game as a regular is one of the best moves that the management of the Pilgrims have made this season. Roach went the entire distance last Wednesday and he was practically the only member of the Pilgrims who retained his speed and effectiveness until the end.

Murray Gets Draw in Clabby Bout

SAN FRANCISCO, April 4.—Referee Jim Griffith called the twenty-round bout between Jimmy Clabby and Billy Murray a draw at the end of the bout at Daly City.

The decision was a surprise to the majority of those present, as many thought the best that could be given Murray was three rounds of the twenty, while Clabby had a distinct advantage in at least eleven.

The referee evidently gave Murray a lot of credit for his work in the fifteenth, when he had the Indianan in a bad way but could not get in a decisive punch.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 4.—Eddie Smith of New York was given the decision over Terry Nelson of Chicago in their eight-round fight here.

Adams Twrils First No-Run, No-Hit Game

COLUMBUS, S. C., April 4.—Milton Adams, a young pitcher of the University of South Carolina, this afternoon defeated Guilford College of North Carolina, 1 to 0, holding the visitors without a hit or a run. Only twenty-nine men faced him. He walked two and one was safe on an error, but one was caught and retired in a double play.

He struck out twelve men, retiring the visitors in order in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh innings. Adam is a Columbia boy and a sophomore.

Marsans Quits the Cincinnati Team

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 4.—Trouble has broken out in the ranks of the Cincinnati Reds and Armando Marsans has quit the team. Manager Herzog ordered Marsans out of the game, charging him with loafing and this was more than the Cuban could stand.

Marsans stated here that he will give President Herrmann a chance to sell or trade him. If Herrmann does not do that Marsans declared he will either jump to the Federals or go back to Cuba.

'HAPPY' READY TO START BIG BOYS' LEAGUE

The Newsboys' League gets under way Monday morning early. "Happy," the newsboy king, calls for every league applicant to meet him on Boston Common Monday morning at 9:30, sharp. Pitchers and catchers be there quarter of an hour early, at 9:15. Here are "Happy's" final instructions of the week:

By "HAPPY."

Well, kids, so far, so good. The preliminary work of starting the Newsboys' League is well out of the way. Now comes the first league meeting and the actual organization.

I want every one of you boys to meet me on Boston Common Monday morning at 9:30. Don't come stringing along anywhere from 9:30 to noon. Be there on time.

Here is a special notice to pitchers and catchers. You be there at 9:15. Any lad who can't get there on time hasn't enough gumption to be a good ball player. He'd get caught between bases.

And boys who have failed to file applications but who wish to join, must be there ahead of time, too, so I can see what can be done for them.

You know you are to be photographed for the Hearst-Selig moving picture films. And "Dick" Sears is to take snapshots of you, too.

There will be the tickets for the performance of "Mutt and Jeff in Panama" at the Globe Theatre. I've told you about that. And then there will be organization of teams and first practice. It will be a busy day.

You know there's a song," It Looks to Me Like a 'Big Night Tonight." Well, it looks more to me like a big season for the Newsboys' League. There will be local games and the trip to Providence, to show the Rhode Island boys how to play and then the big trip to New York.

It looks, too, as though the boys had had the league sized up for a big thing. Read some of the many application letters:

Dear Happy—I am a newsboy, selling at the Washington building, No. 387 Washington street, and wish to join one of your teams. My name is Albert Winitsky, living at N. 50 Barton street, Boston. My brother wishes to do the same. He sells at Bromfield, corner Washington street, and his name is Louis Winitsky. My age is 13½ and my brother's age is 12. For full particulars send to A. Winitsky, 50 Barton street, West End.

P. S.—I would rather play centre field and my brother second base. I saw your advertisement in the paper and I thought I would join in.

Happy—I am 14 years of age and would like to get a chance with the newsboys. I live in Hyde Park now, but I am going to move to Cambridge.

LAWRENCE I. ISRAELSON.

Dear Happy—I am writing these few lines to let you know that I am glad that you put that ad in the paper. I believe your name, Happy, is good because I think you don't get sore if a guy gets out on stealing bases. Please let me know when we are going to start to play ball, because I am fond of playing ball. This is my address and name:

LIPTON SURE OF WINNING AMERICA CUP

If confidence alone won yacht races Sir Thomas Lipton has the America Cup carefully tucked away for all time, safe from the hands of all and any challenger the United States might put across.

In a recent letter from France he wrote:

> I think this time I shall have the best boat that I ever crossed the Atlantic with, and I think my chances this year are on the winning side.

He also stated that his new challenger, the Shamrock, will be launched later than expected and says:

"I thought I would manage to get it launched by the beginning of April, but I have received a letter from Mr. Nicholson, the designer, saying he is afraid it will be the end of April or the beginning of May before she is launched."

On the question of towing and the trip across, Sir Thomas evidently considers the point still unsettled, as he writes:

"Towing cannot help the boat. The strain could not possibly do it any good, and might do it harm.

"The reason I am anxious to have her towed in dead calm weather is because it would give me so much more time in America to get my boat in fit condition for the race.

"I might be becalmed two or three weeks at different times; there is no saying what might happen. I shall make this request of the club at a later period; I should think after the boat is launched."

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

IT'S GOING TO COST A PLAYER OF THE Federal League $25 every time he is chased off the field. What'll be the fun of going to a Fed game anyway?

MANAGER CLARKE OF THE PIRATES claims that he didn't tell Hendrix, jumper to the Feds, to "go to," declaring Hendrix never applied for his old job back. Thus it proves that maybe Hendrix didn't want to get back with the O. B.'s.

By JACK CONWAY.

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—Bill Carrigan's noble army of ball tossers marched into this fair town late this morning and asserted to the assembled populace that they would force the Columbus club of the American Association to lower its colors in defeat before the sun sets behind the western hills tonight.

The Red Sox will pastime here today and tomorrow and will then take a rattler for Indianapolis where they are scheduled to play two games with Jack Hendricks' cub.

The Red Hosed athletes were a pretty chesty bunch of young men when they breezed into this town as they made good their boast to take all three games of their series from the Nashville club.

The final contest yesterday was won by the Red Sox after a hard, up-hill fight by a count of 7 to 4.

KELLY MAY GO IN TODAY.

Ed Kelly, the Pawtucket boy who was obliged to go to the Pacific Coast in order to prove that he is a star ball player, will probably be given a chance to test his skill against Columbus today.

Kelly is a very promising young hurler and as the Red Sox are badly in need of reliable pitchers he will receive plenty of opportunity to make good in the big show.

John Radloff, who made quite a name for himself in the minors as a port sider, will probably pitch a few innings today. Hugh Bedient is still suffering from a cold in his pitching arm and will not go into the box before tomorrow.

Tris Speaker, outfielder and batter extraordinary, may get back into the game today. "Spoke" did not play in the last two contests in Nashville, as he was suffering from a severe cold and Carrigan deemed it wise to have the great centrefielder remain indoors.

WOOD ROUNDING INTO SHAPE.

Joe Wood is fast getting into condition. Wood is out each day with the squad and keeps busy before the game starts. Woods' condition has improved so much since he joined the Red Sox that it would not be a surprise to the writer if he were able to don the spangles by the first of May.

The Red Sox had a narrow escape in the final game in Nashville. They were on the short end of a 4 to 2 score when the eighth inning opened but Lannin's hired men took kindly to the offerings of the Nashville hurler in that session and before the fireworks had ceased five Red Sox players had crossed the counting station and victory was assured.

Carrigan used Mat Zeiser and Coumbe, two of his young pitchers. Zeiser pitched the first four innings and allowed but one hit, while Coumbe held Nashville to three safe blows during the five innings he was in the box.

SCOTT GETS IN A HOMER

Zeiser was very wild in the opening stanza and gave two bases on balls and hit one batter. This, combined with one safe drive, netted Nashville three rounds and the natives were not a bit bashful in stating that the Red Sox were doomed to defeat.

Carrigan's men came back and scored twice in the second session. With Yerkes on first, Scott drove the ball into the left centre bleachers for a home run.

Notes from Red Sox Camp

By JACK CONWAY

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—President Lannin spends a great deal of his time on the road playing checkers. Mr. Lannin is as great a star at this game as some of his ball players are on the diamond.

THERE is not a person in the Red Sox party who is able to make things interesting for the new magnate. Mr. Lannin is modest when discussing his own ability as a checker player, but was forced to admit that there are few checker stars whom he is unable to defeat.

LACK of time in which to practice is the only thing that prevents the Red Sox chief from entering the tournaments. It would not be a bad idea to arrange a match between Mr. Lannin and Christy Mathewson of the Giants. Mathewson is a prominent checker player and if he were to meet the man the "fans" would have something new to talk about.

EDDIE RILEY is a busy young man looking after the business affairs of the Red Sox. Eddie is very popular with the members of the team and they are all rooting for him to make good in his new office.

THE Red Sox are not blessed (or should I say cursed?) with any quartet this year. "Buck" O'Brien and Hugh Bradley were able to bat for .500 in the singing league when they sported Boston uniforms.

O'BRIEN was considered the best singer of the famous Red Sox quartet, and if his pitching arm should go back on him he would be able to earn a livelihood performing behind the footlights.

"BUCK" will pitch for Jack Hendricks' Indianapolis club the coming season, and do not be a bit surprised if he should "come back" and again land a job in the big show. The Red Sox may be opposed by O'Brien when they play Indianapolis.

DUFFY LEWIS continues to shine as the "cleanup" batter of the Red Sox. Lewis is one of the most dangerous men on the team with the war club in a pinch.

FORREST CADY only weighed 183 pounds this Spring. This is fifteen pounds lighter than he was in 1913. Cady is faster on his feet and is showing more speed on the bases.

THE big catcher is eager to have a good year as he wants to aid Carrigan in every way possible. "There is not a better manager in the big leagues," said Cady today, "and we will all work our heads off in order to help Bill make a fine showing this year."

THE other players are also with Carrigan to a man. It is remarkable what an effect a popular manager and a liberal owner can have on a ball club.

CARRIGAN is looking forward to the two games with the Cincinnati Reds, which will be played on April 11 and 12. These contests will give Bill a true line on the real strength of his club.

ED KELLY, the Pawtucket boy who had to go to the Pacific Coast in order to prove that he is a good ball player, has made a big hit with Carrigan. Kelly has plenty of speed and a fine assortment of benders. If he is able to get control, he will make a hard fight for a regular berth with the Red Sox.

KELLY is a quiet, unassuming young fellow and one of the most popular players on the team. He is also cool and collected when in action and uses excellent judgment when in the box.

RAY COLLINS will probably start the season in the box for the Red Sox. The big southpaw is in better condition this Spring than he has ever before been at such an early date in the campaign.

BILL CARRIGAN has decided to take his regular turn behind the bat this year. Bill will always don the big mitt, mask and chest protector when the young pitchers are performing in the box. In this way he will be able to coach them and tip them off to the weaknesses of the various American League batters.

THE Lewiston idol is not the greatest backstop in the big leagues today, but there is not a catcher in the business who is any brainier than Carrigan. And in our humble opinion brains is a mighty important factor in the winning of ball games.

Food for Sport Fans

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

Branch Rickey having opened a baseball school, it is presumed that he will teach the Browns how to play baseball.

The winners of the Fed series in Shreveport will be given one dollar ($1.00) apiece, showing that Joe Tinker has great faith in his men. He is not afraid they will spend it in riotous living.

While the Browns and Cardinals may be lacking in ability they are endowed with an enormous amount of nerve. They actually want money for playing the city series.

NOTHING DOING.

"I will not jump," said Evers;
"I will not be a Fed.
For though they raised my pay so high
That it would reach the Summer sky
I would not be ahead.

"For when ou battle with the umps
They fine you twenty-five,
And if they fined me every day
I wouldn't draw sufficient pay
To keep a flea alive."

If John Evers and Bill Sweeney had jumped to the Feds there would have been enough collected in fines to keep the league afloat.

We are convinced that Joe Azevedo is one of the gamest pugilists. He wants to fight Charlie White again.

Azevedo has a fighting chance to whip White, provided the said White breaks two hands instead of one.

Frank Chance has put the lid on poker so that his athletes may get more sleep. And yet we understood that they did plenty of sleeping in the ball yard.

EXCELSIOR.

The shades of night were falling fast
When from a training camp there passed
A youth who went with heavy stride,
And to the young man's coat was tied
A CAN.

The manager, in accents grim,
Had said these burning words to him:
"Back to the bushes, Hugo Smith!
I fear your dome is padded with—
EXCELSIOR."

As we understand it, the rumpus over the Panama Canal is due to the intentional pass.

One M. Lurie, a pugilist of that dear Paris, wants to fight Bombardier Wells, showing that he has acquired the American habit of looking for something soft.

BASEBALL.

The little old pastime is heavy with dust—
The dust that they keep in the bank.
The dividends grow till the purses all bust
That once were so skinny and lank.

Time was when the little old game was new
And the pocketbook musty and fat;
But now if you play it a season or two
You are almost a millionaire.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 4.—We get out of here on our real journey North tonight, taking the Rattler for Charlotte, N. C., but before leaving the sunny Georgia climes the Braves are booked to hook up with the Crackers in a final struggle this afternoon. The teams have met four times; the Braves have won twice and two contests have resulted in dog falls.

In Macon, earlier in the week, the two teams met in two games and the umpiring was all in favor of the Braves at that time. Manager Bill Smith of the Atlanta team yelled from his bench to the Boston players: "Wait till we get you in Atlanta and we'll get square for this rotten umpiring."

Bill made good his threat at Ponce de Leon Park yesterday. He uncovered and brought forth an umpire properly broken to Atlanta harness. It is not the purpose of this dispatch to unduly knock the official in question. He was simply rotten, that's all.

GAME ENDED ON TIE.

The Braves should have won the game, 3 to 1, but in the closing spasms the umpire uncorked a couple of flats that gave the Crackers two tallies, enough to tie up things so hard that nobody could untie them, and the game ended 3 to 3 at the end of the tenth inning.

George Tyler worked the entire session and pitched one of the best games of his career. He had more speed than he has displayed in a long time, issued very few passes, did not make one of his justly celebrated chucks into the dirt in front of the plate when there were two or three men on the sacks.

It is more than likely that either Tyler or Rudolph will pitch the opening game against Brooklyn on April 14.

DEAL FORCED TO LAY OFF.

Charlie Deal, the third baseman, who has come to the front like a wild horse in the last week of training, had the misfortune to sprain a charley-horse while running to first base after delivering a slashing single in the fourth inning.

The former Providence player has been playing sensational ball at bat, as well as in the field lately, and there is no doubt but that third base will be covered for the Boston Nationals better than it has been since Jimmy Collins' time in the early nineties.

Rudolph will probably pitch this afternoon. He will leave with the team tonight, but instead of stopping at Charlotte, he will continue on to New York to see his wife and seven-months'-old baby, rejoining the team at Washington next Friday.

"Modesty for My Woman, Immodesty for Yours."

Not the immodesty of woman, but the "immodest modesty of men" is the cause of man's wail against the present fashions of dress, according to Marion Cox. That the plans of nature have been reversed by man's act, and that he is to blame for woman's extravagance, vanity and desire to vote, is argued by this author in the Easter Number of

B. C. High Boys Pin Faith in Donahue

"Buck" Donahue of Newton, the former Boston College and Newton High star athlete, has been engaged to coach the Boston College High School baseball candidates. There are but a few of last year's veterans in school and the outlook is somewhat dubious. Of the veterans available are the star battery of the 1913 nine, "Bobby" Gill and Splaine; Shortstop Manley, and Third Baseman "Tommie" Duffy. There is a large number of promising youngsters in the squad and Donahue hopes to be able to develop a team in time for the opening game next Thursday.

Mary O'Neill's Letter to Martin Conrad

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. B. Lippincott Company

I have had such joy in my life, dear—joy in the beauty of the world, in the sunshine and the moon and the stars and the flowers and the songs of the birds, and then (apart from the divine love that is too holy to speak about) in my religion, in my beloved Church, in the love of my dear mother and my sweet child, and above all—above all in you.

I feel a sense of sacred thankfulness to God for giving you to me, and if it has not been for long in this life, it will be for ever in the next.

So good-bye, my dearest me—just for a little moment! My dearest one, Good-bye. MARY O'NEILL.

Mary O'Neill's Last Note Written on the Fly-Leaves of Her Missal.

AUGUST 9-10.

It is all over. I have given him my book. My secret is out. He knows now. I almost think he has known all along.

I had dressed even more carefully than usual, with nurse's Irish lace about my neck as a collar, and my black hair brushed smooth in my mother's manner, and when I went downstairs by help of my usual kind crutch (it is wonderful how strong I have been today) everybody said how much better I was looking.

Martin was there, and he took me into the garden. It was a little late in the afternoon, but such a sweet and holy time, with its clear air and quiet sunshine—one of those evenings when Nature is like a nun "breathless with adoration."

Although I had a feeling that it was to be our last time together we talked on the usual subjects—the High Bailiff, the special license, "the boys" of the Scotia who were coming over for my wedding, and how some of them would have to start out early in the morning.

But it didn't matter what we talked about. It was only what we felt, and I felt entirely happy—sitting there in my cushions, with my white hand in his brown one, looking into his clear eyes and ruddy face or up to the broad blue of the sky.

The red sun had begun to sink down behind the dark bar of St. Mary's Rock, and the daisies in the garden to close their eyes and drop their heads in sleep, when Martin became afraid of the dew.

Then we went back to the house—I walking firmly, by Martin's side, though I held his arm so close.

The old doctor was in his consulting room, nurse was in my room, and we could hear Christian Ann upstairs putting baby into her darling white cot—she sleeps with grandma now.

The time came for me to go up also, and then I gave him my book, which I had been carrying under my arm, telling him to read the last pages first.

Although we had never spoken of my book he seemed to know all about it; and it flashed upon me at that moment that, while I thought I had been playing a game of make-believe with him, he had been playing a game of make-believe with me, and had known everything from the first. There was a certain relief in that, yet there was a certain sting in it, too. What strange creatures we are, we women!

For some moments we stood together at the bottom of the stairs, holding each other's hands. I was dreadfully afraid he was going to break down as he did at Castle Raa, and once again I had that thrilling, swelling feeling (the most heavenly emotion that comes into a woman's life, perhaps) that I, the weak one, had to strengthen the strong.

It was only for a moment, though, and then he put his great gentle arms about me, and kissed me on the lips, and said, silently but oh, so eloquently, "Good-bye darling, and God bless you!"

Then I walked upstairs alone, quite alone, and when I reached the top he was still at the bottom looking up at me. I smiled down to him, then walked firmly into my room and up to my bed, and then . . . down, all my strength gone in a moment.

* * * *

I have had such a wonderful experience during the night. It was like a dream, and yet something more than a dream. I don't want to make too much of it—to say that it was a vision or any supernatural manifestation such as the blessed Margaret Mary speaks about. Perhaps it was only the result of memory operating on my past life, my thoughts and desires. But perhaps it was something higher and more spiritual, and God, for my comforting, has permitted me to look for one moment behind the veil.

I thought it was tomorrow—my wedding day, and the day of Father Dan's thanksgiving celebration—and I was sitting by my French window (which was wide open) to look at the procession.

I seemed to see everything—Father Dan in his surplice, the fishermen in their clean "ganzies," the village people in their Sunday clothes, the Rechabites, the Foresters, and the Odd Fellows with their colored badges and banners coming round the corner of the road, and the mothers with babies too young to be left looking on from the bridge.

I thought the procession passed under my window and went on to the church, which was soon crowded, leaving numbers of people to kneel on the path in front, as far down as the crumbling gate piers which lean towards each other, their foundations having given away.

Then I thought Benediction began, and when the congregation sang I sang also. I heard myself singing:

"Mater purissima,
Ora pro nobis."

Down to this moment I thought I had been alone, but now the Reverend Mother entered my room, and she joined me. I heard her deep rich voice under mine:

"Mater castissima
Ora pro nobis."

Then I thought the Ora ended, and in the silence that followed it I heard Christian Ann talking to baby on the gravel path below. I had closed my eyes, yet I seemed to see them, for I felt as if I were under some strange sweet anaesthetic which had taken away all pain but not all consciousness.

Then I thought I saw Martin come close under my window and lift baby up to me, and say something about her.

I tried to answer him and could not, but I smiled, and then there was darkness, in which I heard voices about me, with somebody sobbing and Father Dan saying, as he did on the morning my mother died:

"Don't call her back. She's on her way to God's beautiful paradise after all her suffering."

After that the darkness became still deeper, and the voices faded away, and then gradually a great light came, a beautiful, marvellous, celestial light, such as Martin describes when he speaks about the aurora, and then . . . I was on a broad white snowy plateau, and Martin was walking by my side.

How wonderful! How wonderful! How eternally glorious!

* * *

It is 4 a. m. Some of "the boys" will be on their way to my wedding. Though I have been often ashamed of letting them come I am glad now for his sake that I didn't try to keep them back. With his comrades about him he will control himself and be strong.

* * *

Such a peaceful morning! There is just light enough to see St. Mary's Rock. It is like a wavering ghost moving in the vapor on the face of the deep. I can hear the far-off murmur of the sea. It is like the humming in a big shell. A bird is singing in the garden and the swallows are twittering in a nest under the thatch. A mist is lying over the meadows, and the tree tops seem to be floating between the earth and the sky.

How beautiful the world is!

Very soon the mist will rise, and the day will break and the sun will come again and . . . there will be no more night.

(End of the Narrative of Mary O'Neill.)

Memorandum of Martin Conrad.

My darling was right. I had known all along, but I had been hoping against hope—that the voyage would set her up, and the air of the Antarctic cure her.

* * *

Presently somebody began to sing in the room above. It was my darling—in her clear sweet silvery voice which I have never heard the like of in this world and never shall agin.

After a moment another voice joined hers—a deep voice, the Reverend Mother's.

All else was quiet. Not a sound on earth or in the air. A hush had fallen on the sea itself, which seemed to be listening for my precious darling's last breath. The sun was going down, very red in its setting, and the sky was full of glory.

When the singing came to an end baby was babbling in my mother's arms—"Bo-loo-lo-lo-mama." I took her and held her up to the open window, crying:

"Look, darling! Here's Girlie!"

There was no answer, but after another moment the Reverend Mother came to the window. Her pale face was even paler than usual, and her lips trembled. She did not speak, but she made the sign of the Cross.

And by that . . . I knew.

"Out of the depths I cry unto thee, O Lord. Lord, hear my cry."

The Author to the Reader.

I saw him off at Tilbury when he left England on his last expedition. Already he was his own man once more. After the blinding, stunning effect of the great event there had been a quick recuperation. His spirit had risen to a wonderful strength and even a certain cheerfulness.

I did not find it hard to read the secret of this great change. It was not merely that Time, the great assuager, had begun to do its work with him, but that he had brought himself to accept without qualm or question Mary O'Neil's beautiful love, and was firmly convinced that, freed from the imprisonment of the flesh, she was with him every day and hour, and that as long as he lived she always would be.

There was nothing vague, nothing fantastic, nothing mawkish, nothing unmanly about this belief, but only the simple faith of a steady and a perfectly clear brain. It was good to see how it braced a strong man for life to face Death in that way.

As for his work I found him quite hopeful. His mission apart, I thought he was looking forward to his third trip to the Antarctic, in expectation of the silence and solitude of that strengthening region.

As I watched the big liner that was taking him away disappear down the Thames, I had no more doubt that he would get down to the South Pole, and finish his task there, than that the sun would rise the following morning.

Whatever happens this time he will "march breast forward."

Martin Conrad to the Author.

WIRELESS—ANTARCTIC CONTINENT (via Macquarie Island and Radio Hobart 16).

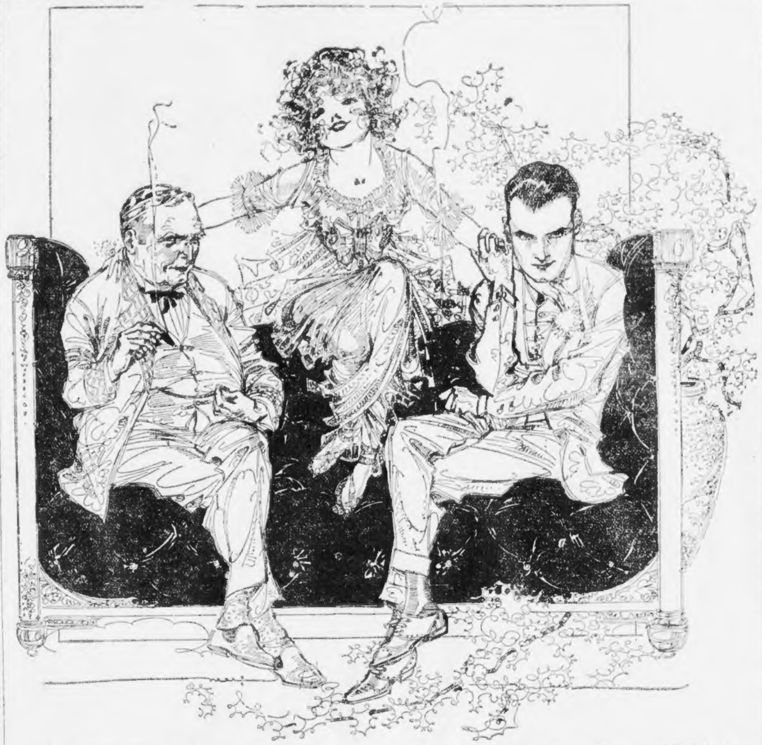
Arrived safe. All well. Weather excellent. Blue sky. Warm. Not a breath of wind. Sun never going down. Constellations revolving without dipping. Feel as if we can see the movement of the world. Start south tomorrow. Calmer than I have ever been since She was taken from me. But She was right. She is here. "Love is stronger than death, many waters cannot quench it."

THE END.

My Sweethearts

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

BY NELL BRINKLEY



"I HAVE," quoth Betty to me, "two everlasting sweethearts! And I cannot tell you which I love the best—for I love one with the 'wherever I am clear across the world I shall adore you,' and the other with 'wherever you go clear across the world I must go with you.' One's big hand I have gripped and held since I first staggered along on rolling little feet with the wind in my skimpy, feathery hair. The hand of the other is a new thrill that closes on mine and draws me into new country—into new lands, where the sky burns bluer than all blue; where the larks rise into its stunning azure, threading golden notes as they go; where the grass is deep and sweet and starred thick with love-blossoms; where the golden mist o' dreams lies low and blinding. One is wearing bare on the top of his frosty head; there are spider-web wrinkles at his eyes, and a maze of smily, whimsical lines around his kind, tight mouth. The other is—how can I 'splain this person to you?—maybe my eyes are swimming with dream and so I can't see right. But straight and tall he stands, ruddy-brown and smooth, bold and daring and keen-eyed, with youth's quick hand on his shoulder, with agile feet that can dance on icy floors with me or climb ambition's twisting stony trail. With one I have chummed and laughed for twenty years, asking a squillion questions, leaning and listening, holding the board that he drove the nail into, reading his book over his shoulder, tramping with him through the breezy country silences. With one my comradery has just begun, our hands have only just met and our feet fallen into step on the road that winds and turns and sings away—whither? And sometimes, when we turn our heads and lock our winded hands still closer and look deep into one another's stranger-lover eyes with sober lips (and we stumble doing this), why, I forget my long, long chumming with my older Love! With one I have known home and lived in a guarded garden. With the other I will know the bitter-sweet of loving—a wild free land—and perhaps a dove nest in the end that I shall help to build. With one I have always taken; with the other I must also give. I am the 'Baby' of the one, and the other—he is mine (for all men are little boys, and the woman who loves them mothers them). In one's eyes I look, and find there strong, deep, splendid loving-love for me—unthinking, unselfish, unending, tender. And then—and then—I turn my face about and search my other lover's eyes. Ad there I find love, too—passion and caressing—glimpses of my House of Life and all the wordless things that lie under the arch of Love's hurrying rosy feet.

"Two sweethearts have I—and they LIKE EACH OTHER."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I DIDENT pass my history examinashun for my school term & wen I cum hoam & toald Pa & Ma I felt ashamed, but Ma sed Nevver mind, Bobbie, you stood fine in all yure other studies & you can maik up yure history the next term.

I cannot understand why a son of mine shud fail in history, sed Pa, that was the study at skool that I was the best in. Why, sed Pa, it got so that even the histry teecher used to ask me wether she was rite or wrong half of the time. History was my middel naim, Pa sed.

These questions that Bobbie has here are very hard for a boy of his age, it seems to me, sed Ma.

I nevver cared wether thay was hard or easy questuns, Pa sed. It is all a matter of memory, histry is. I used to anser the questions as fast as thay was shot at me, & I made no mistakes. I nevver forgot my histry, eether.

Let us see, sed Ma, since you were such a peeler at histry, I will ask you a few of these questuns here and see if you can anser them any better than Bobbie did. What was the Diet of Worms & ware was it held? sed Ma.

Let me see, sed Pa. Oh, yes, the Diet of Worms was during the Spanish Inquisishun. The members of the Inquishun made thare victims starve to deth or else eat worms, & it was called the Diet of Worms, sed Pa.

Wunderful, sed Ma. I will mark you Nix on that anser & ask you a other questun that is here.

In what grate battel was King Harold mortally wounded, & what kind of a weepon wounded him?

Let me see, sed Pa. Harold who?

King Harold, sed Ma.

Was he one of them kings of Ireland? sed Pa.

No, sed Ma, & you are to anser the questuns, not to ask moar.

I am a littel rusty on that, sed Pa, but if I remember right it was at the battel of Waterloo & the weepon was a cannon ball or sum such thing.

You were almost right, sed Ma. The reel facts are that King Harold was wounded at the battle of Hastings. A arrow hit him in the eye. You have ansered two questions wrong so far, sed Ma. As you go along you do not seem to be improving yure batting average very much. Why, even Bobbie ansered the last questun right. I still think thay are pushing the children too fast ahed for thare yeers, sed Ma. Why shud a littel boy of Bobbie's age have to lern about William the Con-queror & King Harold & the Diet of Worms? Here is another questun, Sockratese, she sed to Pa. When did Julius Caesar first enter Gaul?

That was sum time ago, sed Pa. I am a littel rusty on my Latin or I cud tell you that without looking in a histry book. But I do know that he entered Gaul, sed Pa. I remember reeding that thay had sum cold wether wile he was there, but I doant reemember the yeer.

We shall have to mark you Nix on that question, too, sed Ma. When did you dream that you were a grate histry student?

Do You Know That—

A Hungarian citizen has invented an instrument which shows instantly the amount of interest due on any given sum for any period at any given rate of interest. The instrument, made in the size and shape of a watch, is of very simple construction, and inexpensive. All that is necessary to operate it is to place the hands in the proper position on the dial and the exact amount of interest in each case is indicated.

A case is at present being heard before the Paris Law Courts in which a widow named Cotton claims an estate valued at $1,000,000, bequeathed by Jean Thierry, who died in 1675. The case has been pending for 238 years. Much of the property in dispute is situated in the island of Corfu, and an interesting feature of the case is that a great part of it was commandeered by the first Napoleon.

Tabloid Fables

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Why, Mother, do you say that Mr. Jinks has become a wealthy man? He is paid the same salary he always received, and living is higher.

Because, Child, he is paying the respectful attention to a dime that a few years ago he paid to a dollar.

What, Dearest Mother, is meant by the broadening influence of travel?

It means, Daughter, that the man who travels discovers there are millions of people who never heard of his existence, and the discovery is good for him.

Why, Mother, do you claim that Bluebeard's wife had no spending money? The book doesn't say so.

If she had had money to spend, My Precious, there wouldn't have been room in her closets for anything to hang but her clothes.

What, Mother Dear, is meant by the term Bosom Friend?

A Bosom Friend, Child, is the one who speaks with the greatest authority on your faults.

What, Mother, is Inspiration?

It is that for which worthless folks wait, and worthy folks dig.

What does it mean, Mother, when it is said "the punishment fits the crime"?

Ah, Child, it means that the punishment must fit the social standing of the criminal.

I hear, Mother, the preacher declare a man's sin will find him out. Is it true?

Yes, Little One, but they always find his wife at home.

Why, Mother, do you insist that a man should make the most of the sympathy his sweetheart gives him? Will he receive no sympathy after marriage?

Yes, Dear, but it is a different kind. Before marriage she will be so sorry when he tells her he has to work so hard, but after marriage when he begins such a tale of woe she will always reply: "I wish to heaven you had my job!"

Why, Mother Dear, do you say that women are smarter than men?

A woman, My Dear, can do her cooking and take care of a crying baby at the same time, but there never was a man who could keep at his work with a bag of nuts on his desk.

It is true, Mother, that widows are more faithful to the memory of the dead than widowers?

Alas, yes, Child. A widow must wait for some man to ask her to forget, but a widower may rush straight from the cemetery into a proposal, tearing off his crepe on the way.

Is there anything more impolite, Mother, than to interrupt one who is talking?

From a woman's standpoint, No, Child; but from a man's point of view it is more impolite to interrupt one who is eating.

HELP WANTED

The Thrilling Story of a Girl Who Won Her Fight for Love Against Tremendous Odds

Based on [illegible] Copyright, 1914, by [illegible] International News Service.

By WEBSTER DENISON

"And why mustn't I? I like you, little secretary, and you may like me."

His voice softened. He looked into her eyes.

"Now, you do like me, just a teeny, weeny, little bit. Don't you?"

"I like you—but—not like that; you remember what you promised me just now?"

"Yes, I am, little girl, but you're a great temptation. You ought to realize that and appreciate my self-control. I haven't tried to kiss you today."

But his [illegible] was only momentary. He bent over her quickly and seized her again in his arms. She struggled to escape his embrace, and an unexpected reinforcement came—a knock at the door. Scott stepped back a pace.

"Come in," he called, and there appeared the "fixer."

"Hello, Stuart; what's the good word?"

"Very good, indeed. You are quite a valuable assistant."

Gertrude was apparently occupied with her stenographer's pad. Scott glanced toward the lawyer, raised a finger to his lips and addressed the girl.

"Mr. Stuart and I have a little personal matter to talk over. Would you mind, Miss Meyer, if I ask you to leave us for a moment?"

She welcomed the chance for escape and stepped quickly to the door.

"What's the answer, Stuart?" the millionaire asked as she passed out.

"All settled. She accepted the five thousand. I guess that gives you a clean bill of health with the Wilson girl. But I am not hankering for another one of the same kind."

"You got away with it all right, didn't you?"

"Yes, but that kind of a thing gets on my nerves. Now, for Heaven's sake, don't give me another one right away. It looks very much as if I'd have another job pretty soon."

Stuart glanced toward the new secretary's vacant chair.

"Don't let that worry you, old boy," laughed Scott. "Success spells success, just as money gets money. I'm judge of what's going on here and you're—just the attorney at court, not the counsellor. That reminds me, Simpson in the sales department has got a little difficulty on his hands, and I want you to take it up right away. I'll go out and talk it over with him and let you know about it. Just wait a minute, will you, please?"

Scott hurried to the outer office. In a second after the importer had passed out Gertrude returned.

Birds of a Feather

GEORGE STUART was a man of considerable personality and address. He had a remunerative practice aside from his associations with Scott. He lived and dressed up to his income and on the whole got thorough enjoyment out of life. Stuart was a bachelor and something of a boulevardier. He was the kind of man who works hard and when the day's work is done shakes off the shop and goes in quest of untrammeled recreation. Night usually found him in the first three or four rows at some theatrical premier or at his club. Stuart was cheerful and a good deal of a wit, so he was always welcome. He steered clear of politics and had no axes to grind. All in all he was about as popular a man about town as one could find.

In his attitude toward women he was about as scrupulous as Scott, but he was more guarded in his methods. Now, the fact that the importer had employed an exceedingly pretty young secretary hadn't escaped Stuart. He wouldn't have taken Gertrude out to luncheon for half his fortune, especially not in broad daylight. But if she would doff those girlish clothes and get into something a little more mature, he figured she would make a very attractive companion for an evening's jaunt.

He had determined to broach the matter the first time he found an opportunity. It seemed to have arrived. He bestowed one of his most winning smiles on the girl as she resumed her place at her desk and inquired gaily:

"How are you getting along?"

"Splendidly, Mr. Stuart."

With one eye on the door through which Scott had departed, Stuart approached a little closer, swinging his stick in a care-free way.

"How—how do you like Mr. Scott?" he asked.

"Which one?" she parried, naively.

"Which one? Why, there's only one Mister Scott. We don't call the young fellow that; he's just a boy. I've known Jack ever since he was riding a hobby horse. He must be—let me see—Jack must be"—

"He's twenty-four," the girl interrupted quickly, and Stuart started as if some one had switched on an electric current under him. He was watching her keenly now. Apparently in his contemplated role of Romeo he was an added starter in a three-horse race, and he had thought it was just a match affair with the odds a little in his favor.

"How do you know his age?" he said.

"Crane told me." She didn't look up, and busied herself with some work at her desk.

"Crane!" exclaimed the lawyer. "Does he ever talk except to say 'Yes, sir,' and 'No, sir,' and 'Thank you, sir?'"

"No, but I asked him."

"Oh, I see; and did Jack ask Crane how old you are, too?"

"I don't know, sir."

"How old are you, Miss Meyer?"

"Seventeen—past."

"Very far past?"

ANOTHER INSULT

"Eighteen next March."

Vaguely she knew what was coming. Three weeks in an office had sufficed to rend the meagre veneer of innocence with which a girl of the metropolis may be sheathed at times.

Stuart assumed his most gallant air—grandiose, yet condescending.

"If I tell you something—something real nice—will you promise to store it away and not say anything about it? You're a mighty sweet little girl, Miss Meyer, and—you could go a long way with me. Do I make myself clear?"

"Very clear, Mr. Stuart." She met his supercilious smile with a cold, fixed stare. "When I came here I might not have known what you meant. Now it's very clear."

"Yes," he answered, unabashed, "a young girl can learn a great deal in three weeks. I know lawyers who got all their education in less time than that. Well, what do you say? Hurry—J. R. may walk in on us any minute."

"He wouldn't be so greatly shocked if he did. But tell me something, Mr. Stuart. I just want to know. Have you—a daughter?"

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were very dull today, share transactions in New York totalling but about 83,000. Prices were irregular. Very little interest in markets was displayed either by the public or professional operators. There was nothing of an accusing nature in the day's news. At the end in New York the tone was steady. There was little business in Rock Island issues during the session. Common stock closed at a decline of ½ and preferred with a ⅛ gain. Its collateral trust opened ½ higher. In London, Americans had been irregular and narrow. That market was fairly firm. But like others it was apathetic.

Declines at the close in New York included Canadian Pacific ⅛, New Haven ⅛ and American Telephone ⅛. Among gains were Missouri Pacific ½, Reading ⅛, Lehigh Valley ⅛, Steel ⅛ and Northern Pacific ⅛. Southern Pacific, American Can, Amalgamated, Baltimore and Ohio and Union Pacific were unchanged.

At the end in Boston New Haven was off ⅛ and Boston and Maine ½ point, while United Fruit had declined ½, and there were small losses for a number of coppers, including Calumet and Arizona, Granby and Mohawk. Franklin was up ½. Alaska Gold was active in both New York and Boston and closed ½ higher here at 24½.

The New York bank statement in brief is as follows: Average statement: Excess cash reserve, $1,153,550; decrease, $5,211,750; loans, increase, $18,591,000; specie, decrease, $782,000; legal tenders, December $2,923,000; net deposits, increase, $22,825,000; circulation, increase, $7,000. Actual statement: Loans, increase, $23,782,000; specie, increase, $744,000; legal tenders, decrease, $7,068,000; net deposits, increase, $29,467,000; surplus reserve $18,153,300; decrease, $11,884,450.

HOPE FOR DECISION IN MAY.

Eastern railway managements hope for a decision on their petition for increased freight rates in May, as hearings will end on April 27 and the Interstate Commerce Commission is expected to expedite a finding. The impression prevails in Washington that President Wilson is in favor of roads being allowed an advance. It is stated there that he sent word to Democratic Senators who were opposing the confirmation of W. M. Daniels as a member of the commission that he believed it was "time to let up on the railroads," and approving of the economic theories of this candidate, he wanted him on the board.

After rate hearings are over the Interstate Commerce Commission will weigh evidence and consider arguments, and in due time render a decision. If it thinks roads are now getting rates high enough to pay operating expenses and dividends the raise will be refused. On the other hand, according to Commissioner Clements, if it is found present rates are inadequate the commission would not necessarily rule that the increase of 5 per cent. be allowed, but might rule that some other measures be adopted. Western roads, it is said, are preparing to ask for an increase of 10 per cent. Whatever is said there is more hope in railroad circles of an advance for eastern roads.

FUEDAL BARONS IN U. S.

Andre Sayous, a French economic writer, warns French investors in a Paris publication to be exceedingly careful about investing in American securities. He says they should study shares and bonds before buying them, and points out how great a part credit plays in this country. He also compares American captains of industry to fuedal barons, saying:

"The mentality of American business men strongly resembles that of the lords of the Middle Ages, the only difference being that the power of capital has replaced physical force. As some of the lords of the Middle Ages were humans, so some Americans today are of high moral character. Five hundred years ago Europe was and today America is a combatant imbued with narrow individualism."

HOW TARIFF IS WORKING.

The new tariff has been in operation six months and one day, and it is said that it will not reduce customs revenues more than the forecasted $45,000,000 a year. The Treasury's March statement reported revenues of $26,000,000, about $1,500,000 less than the Payne-Aldrich law produced in 1913. The average decrease for the six months is placed at $4,000,000, but officials are confident it will be reduced in the coming six months.

Consumers are as good judges as statesmen and economists as to how much it has reduced the cost of living. It was said before the Underwood-Simmons tariff was enacted it was going to reduce the cost of food by opening the American markets to foreign cattle. It has certainly had the effect of increasing importations on the beef to some extent, whatever the result has been upon the price of meat. The company doing the largest exportation business in Western Canada has increased its American trade to such an extent it is going to increase its capital from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

It is said that a plan for reorganization of the Wabash road will soon be filed. It will call for an assessment of $20 a share. The road needs $30,000,000. Receivers have been running it for six years.

It is expected that the Rural Credits bill will be introduced in both branches of Congress next week.

F. L. Milliken & Co. have issued a leaflet giving high and low prices for last month, dividends for April and other information.

The proposed issue of $75,000,000 preferred stock is what sent Rock Island collateral trust 4 per cent. bonds to a new low price record.

HANDS OFF!
Let the Public Schools Alone, Mr. Curley!

If you ask a man in Oregon, in New Mexico, in Florida, or in any part of the world where conditions in America are known, what Boston is most NOTED for, he will answer that she is most noted for her fine PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM. The leadership of Boston in education has been acknowledged the nation over from the beginning of American history.

Education is the basis of American LIBERTY and SELF-GOVERNMENT. Without it we can have neither of these precious possessions. Therefore, Boston has a proud pre-eminence in the greatest essential of our American life.

Our people of Boston have been PROUD and sensitive on this point, and have protected the public schools from unfriendly attacks, whether by political organizations or ambitious individuals. The government of the schools has been kept OUT of the whirl of politics and OUT of the control of politicians. The wise and good men of all political parties have accepted this situation and no really responsible body of men has ever seriously attempted to change it.

Now comes Mr. Curley, seeking a reputation for economy, and proposes a RAID upon the public schools. He wants to reduce the construction work and to reduce salaries.

To reduce the salary of Superintendent Dyer would be a gross BREACH OF HONOR, for we enticed him away from Cincinnati, where he had the same salary he is receiving here and whose citizens sought to retain him by offering him $2,500 more a year. The salaries of his assistants are fixed by the law of the State, and neither Mr. Curley nor the School Committee may touch them.

Whether Mr. Curley proposes to cut the salaries of the janitors and the women who clean the schools is not yet disclosed. But the AMERICAN does not believe that a great, rich, prosperous city SHOULD CUT SALARIES INDISCRIMINATELY. It is better to discharge a man who is not doing good work than to cut the salaries of men who are not being paid excessively, and the city employes generally are not loafers.

Mr. Curley also proposes to REDUCE the amount of construction work in the school department. This cannot be done without discomfort to the school children which might affect their health.

If there were any need of this indiscriminate economy and RECKLESS LEVELLING, the citizens of Boston might be more patient with Mr. Curley. But the need DOES NOT EXIST. Boston is the RICHEST CITY in the country. Her tax rate is two dollars lower than the average tax rate of the cities in Massachusetts and yet a forty-five cent increase in the tax rate of Boston would meet not only the running expenses of the city, but provide for the progressive improvements.

The AMERICAN warns those honest but ill-informed citizens who are inclined to think that any sort of economy is wise on the part of the politician, that the APPARENT reform of Mayor Curley is ONLY SKIN DEEP; that he can change as quickly from a reformer back to a ward leader as he changed from a ward leader to a reformer.

The man who can embrace John A. Sullivan after he has charged him with the vilest of offences can drop him as quickly as he finds his alliance with that person does not pay.

The AMERICAN advises the Rev. Herbert Johnson and others who are inclined to applaud Mr. Curley, to scrutinize his acts a little more carefully and not to take the word of others, or Mr. Curley's own statements in the newspapers, too credulously.

The wedge which Mr. Curley is attempting to drive into the public schools MUST NOT be allowed even to make a dent. All classes of citizens who have scrupulously protected the public schools will join the AMERICAN in the slogan: "HANDS OFF!"

England Uses Her OWN Canal to Build Up Her Own Commerce

And Mr. Wilson Blandly Proposes to Permit Her to Use OUR Canal for the Same Purpose

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

England built and owns the Suez Canal. We built the Panama Canal and we believe we own it.

English ships use the Suez Canal, and pay the tolls. BUT ENGLAND PAYS BACK ALL SUCH TOLLS IN REBATES TO THE BRITISH VESSELS THAT PAY THEM.

This of course is exactly the same as admitting British ships free to the Suez Canal.

The advantage to British shipping is enormous. It has made the British commercial fleet the master of the Eastern trade. It has carried the British flag to all the Asiatic and African ports, and has vastly enriched the British people.

Naturally, England regards her own course in Suez as only right and proper. The ships of other nations in the same trade are penalized. British ships are enabled to charge low freight rates, and monopolize the trade. The ports of London and Liverpool are prosperous. With the profits from their Eastern steamship lines, British ship owners have been enabled to build fleets for the American and South American traffic, and to gain a practical monopoly of the seas.

It was the immense benefits conferred on British shipping by the Suez Canal that first led the French to undertake the building of the Panama Canal. And it was the purpose of the French,

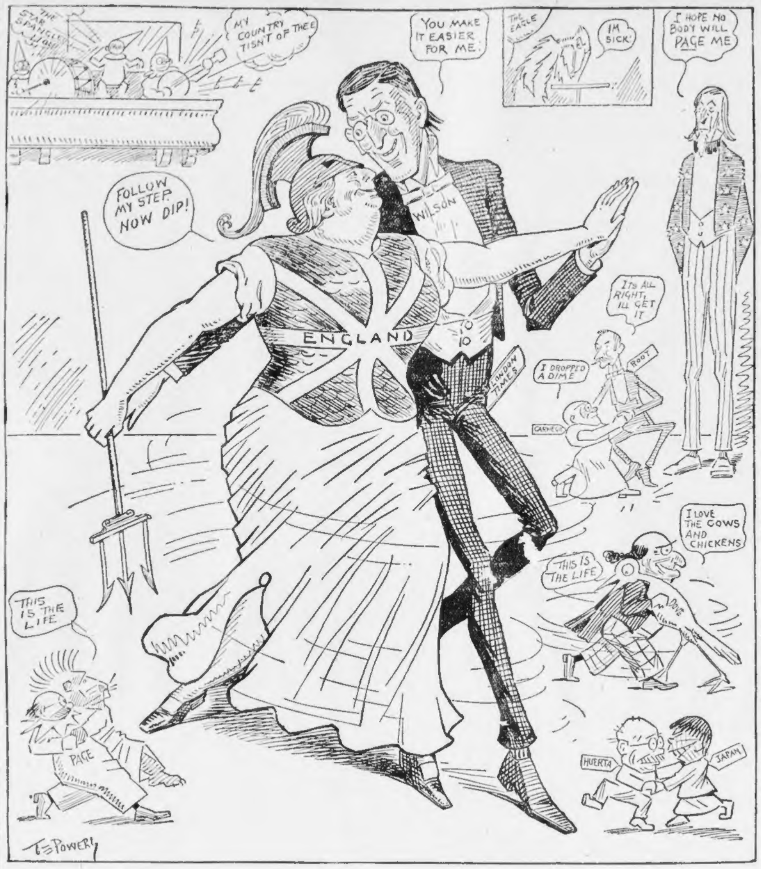
THIS IS THE LIFE



HOW BILL GOT ALONG

When Bill's friend Jim told him that he had gambled away $150 belonging to the firm he was working for, and there was no way he could pay it back, as he had no money or any way of raising any, Bill for the first time since they were roommates lost his temper. "You're a fine type of a man, you are, Jim," said Bill. "Why don't you get onto yourself while there is yet a chance for you?"

"I know, Bill, I know—I deserve anything you say to me," answered Jim, "and I can only tell you I'll TRY from now on, but I guess I'm a weak sister. Just when I think I have it licked for good and all, something happens and the next morning you can still hear the echo from the fall I took off the wagon. But I'll try, Bill—on the level, I'll TRY from now on."

"That's all very fine, but how do you intend to pay back that $150 of the company's money.

"Here's what I'll do for you. I've got $75 in the bank and I'll write home and see if I can't raise another $75. I hate like the dickens to do it—but I will. But first I'm going around to that gambling joint and try to get that money back. Now you get onto yourself and get to work and maybe we can get the money paid back before they get wise at the office." H. C.

Science for Workers

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"WHAT is meant by a searchlight of one million candle power?"

A. As there are many different sizes of candles, the rate of burning and intensity of light radiated would vary. It is almost beyond belief, but England and United States agreed on one point—the standard candle. It is made of pure spermaceti, exactly round, ⅞-inch in diameter, and of a length such that six weigh one pound, and with wick adjusted to burn 120 grains of spermaceti per hour. And the one million candle power searchlight must emit a light equal to 1,000,000 standard candles.

Q.—"If the top of a smokestack, say 200 feet high, were fitted with a properly constructed hood, so as to protect it from the downward currents of air, would the updraft be continuous (and uniform) and if not why not?"

A. Certainly not uniform in rate of ascent. Rigid uniformity is excessively rare in nature. In mechanics the nearest approach known is the uniform acceleration of the specific speed of a falling body of 32.2 feet per second. But this only obtains in a perfect vacuum, and would vary if let fall at different places on the earth.

The ascent of smoke, minute particles of carbon and of all other gases of combustion from various fuels or even from one and the same kind of fuel in a chimney is very erratic and variable. The rate of burning varies, and the variable heat causes the rates of ascent of air and the mixed gases to vary.

The hood on top only prevents winds, currents and swirls of air, and has nothing to do with rates of ascent starting from the furnace at bottom. Therefore, rates in a smokestack are about as variable as any other imaginable.

England Uses Her OWN Canal to Build Up Her Own Commerce

after they had built the canal, to use it for the advantage of their own commerce.

But the French failed in Panama, and the United States, taking up the work, carried it out successfully.

The American people willingly bore the great cost of construction. They looked forward to the day when the canal should build up American shipping, restore the American flag to the seas, and build up the coast and the interior by increased commerce and lower freight rates.

But England, clinging firmly to her own monopoly at Suez, objected violently to any American advantage in the American Canal.

The first protest came from the Canadian Pacific Railroad, owned in England. The directors of the road foresaw an immediate lowering of freight rates the minute water competition was opened.

Their protest was echoed by the British ship owners. They foresaw American competition on the seas, which they had come to regard as their own exclusive property.

No particular attention was paid by Americans to this arrogant British attitude at first. It seemed natural enough that Great Britain should be displeased at the prospect of a greater American commerce. In the past no American in any important office has worried very much about British dissatisfaction, which began with the Revolution and has continued intermittently ever since.

But to the amazement of patriotic Americans the President of the United States, although pledged by the party platform which he accepted to open our Canal to our own ships, suddenly took the British view of the controversy.

Thus the present situation was brought about. The President was joined by Elihu Root, who is always opposed to the people of the United States, and by Andrew Carnegie, who has a fond dream of uniting the two nations under the British flag.

Encouraged by this support the President carried the fight into the House, and forced the patronage-hunting Congressmen in that body to desert their leaders and follow his lead.

Fortunately it will be nearly two months before the next fight—which will take place in the Senate. The American people are now thoroughly aroused. They have never tamely submitted to Great Britain and they never will.

And to a demand to turn over to them OUR Canal on their own terms, when they refuse to all other nations equal terms in their own canal, is a piece of arrogance of which only the British could be capable, and which must be answered by the Senate in sturdy American fashion.
